NEW QUESTION # 75

What does the default "local" Terraform backend store?

- A. Terraform binary
- B. tfplan files
- C. State file
- D. Provider plugins

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The default "local" Terraform backend stores the state file in a local file named terraform.tfstate, which can be used to track and manage the state of your infrastructure.

NEW QUESTION # 76

You can reference a resource created with for_each using a Splat (*) expression.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

You cannot reference a resource created with for_each using a splat (*) expression, as it will not work with resources that have non-numeric keys. You need to use a for expression instead to iterate over the resource instances.

NEW QUESTION # 77

You decide to move a Terraform state file to Amazon S3 from another location. You write the code below into a file called backend.tf.

Which command will migrate your current state file to the new S3 remote backend?

- A. terraform push
- B. terraform refresh
- C. terraform state
- D. terraform init

Answer: D

Explanation:

This command will initialize the new backend and prompt you to migrate the existing state file to the new location. The other commands are not relevant for this task.

NEW QUESTION # 78

Terraform can only manage resource dependencies if you set them explicitly with the depends_on argument.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: B

Explanation:

Terraform can manage resource dependencies implicitly or explicitly. Implicit dependencies are created when a resource references another resource or data source in its arguments. Terraform can infer the dependency from the reference and create or destroy the resources in the correct order. Explicit dependencies are created when you use the `depends_on` argument to specify that a resource depends on another resource or module. This is useful when Terraform cannot infer the dependency from the configuration or when you need to create a dependency for some reason outside of Terraform's scope.
