Nutanix Certified Professional - Cloud Integration - Azure (NCP-CI-Azure v6.7) Sample Questions (Q26-Q31):

NEW QUESTION # 26

An administrator needs to attach a network interface to a Flow Gateway VM.

What option should be enabled in the Azure portal and in the OS of the Flow gateway VM to meet this network requirement?

- A. Static Route
- B. Port Tagging
- C. Dynamic Route
- D. IP Forwarding

Answer: D

Explanation:

* IP Forwarding in Azure: Enabling IP forwarding allows the VM to forward network traffic that is not specifically addressed to itself. This is necessary for network devices like the Flow Gateway VM to route traffic correctly.

* Network Interface Configuration: Both the Azure portal settings and the VM's operating system must * have IP forwarding enabled to ensure proper traffic handling and routing capabilities.

NEW QUESTION # 27

When configuring permissions for an Azure subscription, which role is required to delegate minimum permissions for the Azure AD App registration?

- A. Azure Reader role
- B. Azure Contributor role
- C. Azure Custom role defined by Nutanix
- D. Azure user Access Administrator role

Answer: D

Explanation:

Azure AD App Registration: When setting up an application registration in Azure AD, specific permissions are required to delegate access.

User Access Administrator Role: This role has the necessary permissions to manage user access to Azure resources, including delegating permissions for app registrations.

Comparison of Roles:

Azure Reader Role: Grants read-only access, insufficient for managing app registrations.

Azure Contributor Role: Allows creation and management of resources but does not include permissions to manage access.

Azure Custom Role: While it can be defined to meet specific needs, the User Access Administrator role is predefined to handle access delegation.

Conclusion: The Azure User Access Administrator role is required to delegate minimum permissions for Azure AD App registration.

NEW QUESTION # 28

An administrator is planning on building the network prior to deploying a Nutanix cluster into Azure.

Which two components require their own vNets for NC2 in Azure? (Choose two.)

- A. Prism Central
- B. Bare-metal instance
- C. Virtual Network Gateway
- D. Azure Load Balancer

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

* NC2 on Azure Deployment: Deploying Nutanix clusters in Azure involves configuring various components, each needing appropriate network isolation and configuration.

* Components and vNets:

* Bare-metal instance: Requires its own vNet to ensure proper network isolation and performance.

* Prism Central: Needs a dedicated vNet to manage and monitor the Nutanix environment, ensuring it has the required network access and isolation.

* Azure Load Balancer: Does not require its own vNet but needs to be associated with the appropriate vNet where services are deployed.

* Virtual Network Gateway: Is used for VPN connections but does not necessitate a separate vNet; it operates within an existing vNet.

* Network Isolation: Providing separate vNets for Bare-metal instances and Prism Central ensures optimal performance and management capabilities.

* Conclusion: Both Bare-metal instances and Prism Central require their own vNets in the NC2 on Azure deployment.

Which action should the administrator take to troubleshoot the error shown in the exhibit?

- A. Check the Azure AD App registration Client Secret.
- B. Check the PC VNet is peered correctly.
- C. Check the NC2 organization permissions.
- D. Check the Azure subnet delegation status.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To troubleshoot the error shown in the exhibit where Azure credentials are not valid and the creation of the resource group failed, the administrator should:

* Verify that the Azure AD App registration has been correctly configured, especially the Client Secret.

* Ensure that the Client Secret is valid, has not expired, and matches what has been entered in the configuration.

This step is crucial because an invalid or expired Client Secret would prevent the validation of Azure credentials and the creation of necessary resources.

NEW QUESTION # 30

Exhibit.

An administrator is trying to create an NC2 cluster in Azure, but does not see the required region in the drop-down list. Which two steps could the administrator take to resolve this issue? (Choose two.)

- A. Check the NC2 Billing console to ensure the region is listed.
- B. Ensure that the Azure region is whitelisted for use by Microsoft in the subscription.
- C. Check the list of regions specified under the NC2 organization cloud account.
- D. Check the Azure subscription is created in the correct region.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

* Check the list of regions specified under the NC2 organization cloud account: The list of available regions in the NC2 console might be restricted based on the configuration of the cloud account associated with the NC2 organization. Verifying this list ensures that the desired region is included and available for cluster creation.

* Ensure that the Azure region is whitelisted for use by Microsoft in the subscription: Sometimes, specific regions need to be explicitly enabled or whitelisted in the Azure subscription for certain services. This step ensures that the required region is permitted for use within the Azure subscription, allowing the NC2 cluster to be created in that region.
