Nutanix Certified Professional - End User Computing (NCP-EUC) 6.10 Exam Sample Questions (Q47-Q52):

NEW QUESTION # 47

Which feature can be utilized to ensure that a container always has enough space to accommodate a specific- sized workload?

- A. Linked Clones
- B. Thick Provisioning
- C. A Storage Pool
- D. Capacity Reservation

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Nutanix storage architecture, Capacity Reservation (also known as "Reserved Capacity") is the feature designed to guarantee space at the container level.

Nutanix documentation states: "To ensure that there is space available for a storage container, you can enable capacity reservation. Capacity reservation ensures that a storage container has a minimum allocated capacity, preventing other storage containers from using that reserved space." This effectively isolates the required storage amount from the shared Storage Pool, ensuring the specific workload housed in that container always has the physical capacity it requires, regardless of the consumption by other containers in the pool.

NEW QUESTION # 48

An administrator needs to migrate MCS non-persistent workloads to Nutanix.
Which statement is true regarding this task?

- A. All pooled VMs should be migrated using Move.
- B. Only persistent workloads can be migrated so this isn't applicable.
- C. A replicated base image should be used to redeploy a new catalog.
- D. MCS only supports migration to Citrix Cloud.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When migrating Machine Creation Services (MCS) non-persistent (pooled) environments to Nutanix, it is not efficient or recommended to migrate the individual worker VMs using migration tools like Nutanix Move.

These VMs are ephemeral clones that are deleted or reset upon reboot.

The correct architectural procedure is to migrate the Master Image (Gold Image). The administrator should replicate the base image VM to the Nutanix cluster (using Nutanix Move or Data Protection replication), install the necessary Nutanix drivers (VirtIO) and the Citrix VDA, and then snapshot this migrated image.

This snapshot is then used by the MCS service to redeploy a fresh catalog of worker VMs native to the Nutanix AHV infrastructure. This ensures all clones are properly linked to the new storage architecture and avoids the overhead of moving disposable data.

NEW QUESTION # 49

A company has decided to use Citrix Optimizer tool to prepare their gold image.
Which two actions does Optimizer take to improve the gold image creation process? (Choose two.)

- A. uses built-in templates to perform optimizations.
- B. Optimizes storage capacity usage.
- C. Applies best practices for securing virtual desktops.
- D. Optimizes user environments for better performance

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

The Citrix Optimizer tool is used to prepare Windows operating system images for use in a virtual desktop environment. Some of the actions that it takes to improve the gold image creation process include:

Optimizes user environments for better performance: The tool removes unnecessary or redundant services, features, and applications from the image, which can improve performance and reduce resource usage.

Uses built-in templates to perform optimizations: The tool comes with pre-configured templates that are optimized for specific environments, such as virtual desktops or server workloads. These templates can be customized based on the specific needs of the organization.

NEW QUESTION # 50

An administrator is using EUC broker software to manage and direct connections to virtual desktops and applications. After losing power to a host in the cluster, the administrator needs to make sure the broker VMs restart. What will happen to the broker VMs in this situation?

- A. Built-in AHV policies will automatically restart the VMs.
- B. The VMs will live migrate to a powered-on host.
- C. A policy must be created so the VMs will power back on.
- D. The VMs will remain powered off until the host is back online.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Nutanix AHV includes a native feature called VM High Availability (VMHA), which protects VMs in the event of a host failure (such as power loss).

When a host fails, the Acropolis High Availability service detects the failure. Built-in AHV policies automatically restart the affected VMs on the remaining healthy hosts in the cluster.

Live migration (Option D) is not possible because the host is already down (powered off), meaning the memory state cannot be transferred; the VMs must be restarted (booted) on new hosts. No manual policy creation (Option B) is required as this is a core default function of the AHV cluster, provided resources are available.

NEW QUESTION # 51

An administrator needs to manage the virtual desktop environment for a small QA group. Which two requirements would prevent a non-persistent deployment? (Choose two.)

- A. users need to log on and log off frequently.
- B. users need to access web-based applications.
- C. users need to test application installation routines.
- D. users need to test various peripherals.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

non-persistent VDI is a type of virtual desktop infrastructure (VDI) that does not save any changes made by the user on the virtual machine (VM) across sessions. Non-persistent VDI uses a master image to create and delete VMs as needed.

Therefore, if the administrator needs to manage a non-persistent deployment, they should avoid any requirements that involve modifying or installing applications on the VMs, as those changes would not be saved.
