EC-COUNCIL EC Council Certified Incident Handler (ECIH v3) Sample Questions (Q202-Q207):

NEW QUESTION # 202

Miko was hired as an incident handler in XYZ company. His first task was to identify the PING sweep attempts inside the network. For this purpose, he used Wireshark to analyze the traffic. What filter did he use to identify ICMP ping sweep attempts?

- A. `udp.ltype - 7`
- B. `icmp.type == 8 or icmp.type == 0`
- C. `icrip.ltype == icmp`
- D. `tcp.typec == icmp`

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 203

Which of the following digital evidence temporarily stored on a digital device that requires a constant power supply and is deleted if the power supply is interrupted?

- A. Slack space
- B. Event logs
- C. Process memory
- D. Swap file

Answer: C

Explanation:

Process memory, or volatile memory (RAM), is digital evidence that requires a constant power supply to retain data and is deleted or lost when the power supply is interrupted. It contains information about the system's ongoing processes and operations. This type of evidence can be crucial for forensic investigations as it may hold information about user actions, system events, and the state of applications and services at the time of an incident. Unlike swap files, event logs, and slack space, which can retain information without a constant power supply, process memory is inherently volatile and its contents are lost when a device is powered off or restarts. References: The ECIH v3 certification program includes discussions on digital forensics and the importance of different types of digital evidence, including volatile and non-volatile memory, in the context of incident response and investigation.
