Which policy should be used to meet this requirement?

- A. Latency routing policy
- B. Geolocation routing policy
- C. Simple routing policy
- D. Multivalue routing policy

Answer: D

Explanation:

Use a multivalue answer routing policy to help distribute DNS responses across multiple resources. For example, use multivalue answer routing when you want to associate your routing records with a Route 53 health check. For example, use multivalue answer routing when you need to return multiple values for a DNS query and route traffic to multiple IP addresses.<https://aws.amazon.com/premiumsupport/knowledge-center/multivalue-versus-simple-policies/>

NEW QUESTION # 75

A company is hosting a static website on Amazon S3 and is using Amazon Route 53 for DNS. The website is experiencing increased demand from around the world. The company must decrease latency for users who access the website.

Which solution meets these requirements MOST cost-effectively?

- A. Provision accelerators in AWS Global Accelerator. Associate the supplied IP addresses with the S3 bucket. Edit the Route 53 entries to point to the IP addresses of the accelerators.
- B. Enable S3 Transfer Acceleration on the bucket. Edit the Route 53 entries to point to the new endpoint.
- C. Replicate the S3 bucket that contains the website to all AWS Regions. Add Route 53 geolocation routing entries.
- D. Add an Amazon CloudFront distribution in front of the S3 bucket. Edit the Route 53 entries to point to the CloudFront distribution.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Amazon CloudFront is a content delivery network (CDN) that caches content at edge locations around the world, providing low latency and high transfer speeds to users accessing the content. Adding a CloudFront distribution in front of the S3 bucket will cache the static website's content at edge locations around the world, decreasing latency for users accessing the website. This solution is also cost-effective as it only charges for the data transfer and requests made by users accessing the content from the CloudFront edge locations.
