- D. To add charts directly to generate reports in the current ADOM.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 28

NEW QUESTION # 29

(Which two parameters does FortiAnalyzer use to identify an indicator of compromise (IOC)? (Choose two answers))

- A. Policy ID
- B. URL
- C. IP address
- D. Application category

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of knowledge of FortiAnalyzer 7.6 Study guide documents:

The FortiAnalyzer study guide explains that IOC identification is performed by comparing relevant log fields against the FortiGuard threat database. Specifically, it states: "Depending on the log type, FortiAnalyzer identifies possible compromised hosts by checking the threat database against the log's IP address, domain, and URL." From this extract, two of the explicit parameters FortiAnalyzer uses for IOC detection are IP address and URL (both listed verbatim). Policy ID and application category are not part of the IOC matching parameters described for threat-database checks in this context.

This is further consistent with the study guide's definition of indicator types, which states: "There are three types of indicators: IP addresses, URLs, and domains."
