NEW QUESTION # 56

An analytical review reveals that XYZ Company's cost of goods sold has increased by 75% in the last year. However, its sales revenues only increased by 25% during the same period. This situation MOST LIKELY indicates which of the following?

- A. There were fewer sales this year compared to last year.
- B. There were more sales returns this year than in the prior year.
- C. The company started recording warranty liabilities.
- D. Inventory has been depleted by theft.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Detailed Explanation:

* Rationale for Correct Answer: A disproportionate increase in COGS without a corresponding increase in sales is a red flag for inventory theft or misappropriation. Theft reduces ending inventory, which artificially inflates COGS, while sales remain unchanged or grow modestly.

* Analysis of Incorrect Options:

* A - Warranty liabilities affect expenses, not COGS.

* B - Fewer sales would reduce both revenue and COGS proportionally, not cause a large disparity.

* C - Sales returns reduce revenue, not inflate COGS.

* Key Concept: Using analytical review to detect inventory theft via COGS anomalies.

Financial statement fraud is committed by:

- A. Mid and lower-level employees
- B. Organized criminals
- C. Senior Management
- D. All of the above

Answer: C

Explanation:

Detailed Explanation:

* Rationale for Correct Answer: While asset misappropriation schemes are usually committed by lower-level employees, financial statement fraud is most often committed by senior management. This is because executives have the authority to override controls, direct accounting policies, and influence financial reporting for personal gain (bonuses, stock prices, or to conceal poor performance).

* Analysis of Incorrect Options:

* A. Organized criminals - May commit fraud, but financial statement fraud specifically requires authority over reporting.

* B. Mid and lower-level employees - Lack sufficient authority to materially alter financial statements.

* D. All of the above - Incorrect, as financial statement fraud is overwhelmingly associated with senior management.
