- B. Corporate objectives should be set by comparing the organisation's performance to its most closest associated peer
- C. Corporate objectives are derived from the Asset Management strategy

Answer: A

Explanation:

The flow of alignment is from top-level corporate objectives to AM strategy, then to AM objectives, and finally to plans and activities. The reverse (A) is incorrect. C may be a benchmarking approach but is not a guiding principle.

Exact Extract from IAM - Asset Management: An Anatomy (v4), Section 4.1 - Strategic Alignment:

- A. A substitute for quality management
- B. A project management system
- C. A strategic and analytical approach to the management of a business's assets
- D. All False

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Asset Life Cycle refers to the complete sequence of phases an asset undergoes from its creation to final disposal. It includes stages such as planning, acquisition, commissioning, operation, maintenance, and disposal. It is not just a linear timeline but a framework for making optimized, value-driven decisions throughout the asset's existence.

* Option A is correct: Asset management involves the strategic and analytical control of assets over their lifecycle.

* Option B is incorrect: Project management is a tool used within specific lifecycle phases.

* Option C is false: Asset management complements but does not replace quality management.

* Option D is not applicable, as the premise of Option A is accurate.

Exact Extract from IAM - Asset Management: An Anatomy (v4), Section 3.4 - The Asset Lifecycle:

"The asset lifecycle is a concept used to describe the phases of activity over the life of an asset..."

Organizations need to understand how asset decisions and activities interrelate across these phases and manage them in an integrated manner."
