NEW QUESTION # 39

Some international electric utilities use 'net metering' for customers with renewable energy equipment, such as photovoltaic power panels. Which of the following best describes net metering with regard to excess power generation and utility billing practices?

SELECT THE CORRECT ANSWER

- A. Accept excess electric energy generated by a customer's energy system but with no financial compensation for the energy fed into the utility's transmission system
- B. Accept excess electric energy generated by a customer's energy system, the value of which can offset the value of energy consumed by the customer over the net metering period
- C. Transmit electric energy generated by a customer's energy system so that the customer may sell the excess electricity to another company on the transmission system

Answer: B

Explanation:

Net metering allows customers with renewable energy systems to receive credit for excess electricity fed back to the grid, offsetting their consumption over a billing period. This mechanism encourages renewable energy adoption by providing financial benefits to consumers.
