CWNP Certified Wireless Design Professional Sample Questions (Q95-Q100):

NEW QUESTION # 95

When using a WLAN design tool with propagation modeling capabilities, what critical step must be performed before adding APs, antennas, and attenuation factors like walls?

- A. Nothing; just begin by adding APs, antenna and attenuators
- B. Calibrate the floor plan to increase accuracy
- C. Add pictures of the environment
- D. Set the transmit power for all APs

Answer: B

Explanation:

Accurate WLAN design relies heavily on the precision of the floor plan used in predictive modeling tools.

Before placing Access Points (APs), antennas, or defining attenuation factors, it's imperative to calibrate the floor plan. This involves setting a known scale, typically by measuring a known distance within the plan, to ensure that the software accurately represents real-world dimensions.

Proper calibration ensures that signal propagation, coverage areas, and interference zones are accurately predicted, leading to a more reliable and efficient WLAN design.

NEW QUESTION # 96

You are using site software design features. You have imported a floor plan, but the simulated RF coverage is nowhere close to the real RF coverage you see with a walkabout.

Given that the simulation is significantly different, when step was likely missed when using the software?

Response:

- A. Calibration
- B. Conversion to PNG
- C. Conversion to DWG
- D. Adding extra APs to simulate interference

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 97

How much more power can a 1 Mbps 802.11b signal have than a 54 Mbps 802.11g signal if it is sent through a saturated amplifier?

Response:

- A. 2 dB
- B. 2 dBm
- C. 5 dBm
- D. 5 dB

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 98

What is the minimum PoE budget needed on a switch to support 6 (six) APs that can only be powered using IEEE 802.3at if no other details are provided?

Response:

- A. 240 W
- B. 320 W
- C. 60 W
- D. 180 W

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 99

When preparing a floor plan graphic for use in predictive and manual site surveying, what calibration method will lead to the most accurate and reliable RF data?

- A. Calibrate the ceiling height of the floor plan first, then the survey software should be able to auto-calibrate the X and Y planes of the graphic.
- B. Use the known size of a small object, such as a ceiling tile, and use a single instance of this object (e.g. a single ceiling tile) to scale the floor plan.
- C. Use the longest available measurement (like a straight exterior wall) to calibrate the graphic's scale.
- D. Measure the width of an actual office doorway with a tape measure and use this value to calibrate against a doorway graphic.

Answer: C
