ISQI ISTQB Foundation Level - Acceptance Testing Sample Questions (Q43-Q48):

NEW QUESTION # 43
Which tool fits the mentioned acceptance test activities BEST?

- A. Requirements management tools for managing acceptance test execution campaigns.
- B. Business process management tools for modeling business processes and rules.
- C. Model-based testing tools for managing incidents.
- D. Test management and automation tools for business process model-based acceptance test generation.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 44
As a tester you participate in the project of the decision support system for granting a loan. You are asked to review the acceptance criteria for the following requirement:
REQ 3.28. The automated system records critical credit application data (CCAD. needed to support application screening.
Assume that it is well known what kind of data CCAD are. Which of the following would be the BEST example of an acceptance criterion for this requirement?

- A. The CCAD record process is quick and reversible.
- B. The CCAD are stored in the MySQL relational database after each successful data entry procedure.
- C. The CCAD is not recorded if it is incomplete and a message is displayed.
- D. The process for collecting CCAD meets corporate usability guidelines.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Acceptance criteria must be concrete, testable, and focused on observable system behavior. They define what the system must do to satisfy a requirement and help determine whether the requirement has been successfully implemented.
REQ 3.28 states: "The automated system records critical credit application data (CCAD) needed to support application screening."
From this, we infer that the system must persistently store this data after data entry.
Option A is the best match because it provides a specific, observable behavior (CCAD being stored in a MySQL database after a successful entry) that can be verified through acceptance testing. It's a measurable outcome, aligned with the requirement's objective.
Other options are less suitable:
Option B introduces new behavior (displaying a message) not directly tied to the original requirement.
Option C is vague ("quick and reversible") and lacks measurable criteria.
Option D refers to usability guidelines, which is not directly relevant to the storage functionality stated in the requirement.
Exact Reference - ISTQB CTFL Acceptance Testing Syllabus (Section 1.3.2):

"Well-written acceptance criteria are unambiguous, testable, and focused on observable results."

NEW QUESTION # 45
Which of the following techniques is most likely applied to ensure the quality of acceptance testing activities?

- A. Eye tracking to verify the feasibility of previously defined user acceptance tests.
- B. Verification of the traceability between user stories and test cases to make sure it is up to date.
- C. Review of the source code to ensure traceability of user stories to system components.
- D. Checklist-based verification of requirements to ensure their completeness and quality.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Ensuring traceability between requirements (user stories) and test cases is a cornerstone of quality assurance in acceptance testing. It confirms that all business needs are covered by corresponding tests and helps assess the impact of changes. Traceability matrices or tools are used to track these links throughout the lifecycle.
Option B is correct because regularly verifying and updating traceability ensures that acceptance test coverage remains aligned with evolving requirements - a best practice in quality assurance.
Other options:
A (review of source code) is a white-box technique, more suitable for unit or integration testing.
C (checklist-based verification of requirements) is useful but focuses on requirement quality, not directly on testing activities.
D (eye tracking) is a usability evaluation technique and not standard for verifying test case feasibility.
B). Verification of the traceability between user stories and test cases to make sure it is up to date.

NEW QUESTION # 46
Which one of the following statements describes the relation between business goals, business needs and requirements BEST?

- A. Business goals and business needs are synonyms.
- B. Business goals, business needs and requirements describe at different levels of abstraction, what shall be achieved.
- C. Business needs address the business solution whereas business requirements define the business problem or opportunity.
- D. To derive the business needs, the business analyst first has to understand the business goals and requirements.

Answer: B

Explanation:
According to ISTQB and the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) standards, the terms business goals, business needs, and requirements are related but represent different levels of abstraction in defining what an organization aims to achieve.
* Business Goals represent the high-level strategic objectives an organization wants to accomplish.
These are broad statements of intent and typically reflect long-term ambitions.
* Business Needs specify what the business must address to meet its goals; these are more focused descriptions of the problems or opportunities that justify the business change. They provide a rationale for why a project or initiative is undertaken.
* Requirements are detailed specifications that describe the features, functions, or qualities the solution must have to fulfill the business needs.
The relationship is hierarchical and increasingly specific: business goals set the overarching purpose, business needs interpret these goals into actionable problem statements or opportunities, and requirements specify the solution details.
ISTQB glossary and syllabus excerpts confirm this layered approach, clarifying that these terms are not synonymous but instead describe the same concept at varying levels of detail and abstraction. Therefore, option B best captures this nuanced relationship.
Exact Extract from ISTQB Foundation Level Syllabus (Business Analysis Section):
"Business goals, business needs, and requirements describe, at different levels of abstraction, what shall be achieved by the business change. Business goals are high-level statements; business needs are statements of problems or opportunities to be addressed, and requirements define the detailed attributes of the solution to meet those needs."

NEW QUESTION # 47
Which one of the following statements describes the collaboration between business analysts and testers BEST?

- A. Testers participate in identifying business needs of stakeholders to better understand the business needs and related requirements.

- B. Once the requirements and acceptance criteria have been defined, business analysts are no longer involved in testing activities.
- C. Business analysts collaborate on test planning and risk analysis to ensure that further on, appropriate test cases are developed and prioritized.
- D. Business analysts usually cannot review acceptance tests, because they do not understand the technical details.

Answer: C
