Amazon AWS Certified Developer - Associate Sample Questions (Q261-Q266):

NEW QUESTION # 261

A company wants to use AWS AppConfig to gradually deploy a new feature to 15% of users to test the feature before a full deployment.

Which solution will meet this requirement with the LEAST operational overhead?

- A. Set up a custom script within the application to randomly select 15% of users. Assign a flag for the new feature to the selected users.
- B. Use AWS AppConfig to create a feature flag without variants. Implement a custom traffic splitting mechanism in the application code.
- C. Create separate AWS AppConfig feature flags for both groups of users. Configure the flags to target 15% of users.
- D. Create an AWS AppConfig feature flag. Define a variant for the new feature, and create a rule to target 15% of users.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The company wants to gradually release a new feature to 15% of users to perform testing. AWS AppConfig is designed to manage and deploy configurations, including feature flags, allowing controlled rollouts.

Feature Flags: Enable or disable features dynamically without redeploying code.

Variants: Define different configurations for subsets of users.

Targeting Rules: Specify rules for which users receive a particular variant.

NEW QUESTION # 262

A developer is using AWS CodeDeploy to launch an application onto Amazon EC2 instances. The application deployment fails during testing. The developer notices an IAM_ROLE_PERMISSIONS error code in Amazon CloudWatch logs.

What should the developer do to resolve the error?

- A. Ensure that the deployment group is using the correct role name for the CodeDeploy service role.
- B. Attach the AWSCodeDeployRoleECS policy to the CodeDeploy service role.
- C. Attach the AWSCodeDeployRole policy to the CodeDeploy service role.
- D. Ensure the CodeDeploy agent is installed and running on all instances in the deployment group.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 263

A developer wants to insert a record into an Amazon DynamoDB table as soon as a new file is added to an Amazon S3 bucket. Which set of steps would be necessary to achieve this?

- A. Create an AWS Lambda function that will poll the S3 bucket and then insert the records into DynamoDB.
- B. Create an event with Amazon EventBridge that will monitor the S3 bucket and then insert the records into DynamoDB.
- C. Configure an S3 event to invoke an AWS Lambda function that inserts records into DynamoDB.
- D. Create a cron job that will run at a scheduled time and insert the records into DynamoDB.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Amazon S3 is a service that provides highly scalable, durable, and secure object storage. Amazon DynamoDB is a fully managed NoSQL database service that provides fast and consistent performance with seamless scalability. AWS Lambda is a service that lets developers run code without provisioning or managing servers. The developer can configure an S3 event to invoke a Lambda function that inserts records into DynamoDB whenever a new file is added to the S3 bucket. This solution will meet the requirement of inserting a record into DynamoDB as soon as a new file is added to S3.

NEW QUESTION # 264

A developer is creating an application that uses an Amazon DynamoDB table. The developer needs to develop code that reads all records that were added to the table during the previous day, creates HTML reports, and pushes the reports into third-party storage. The item size varies from 1 KB to 4 KB, and the index structure is defined with the date. The developer needs to minimize the read capacity that the application requires from the DynamoDB table.

Which DynamoDB API operation should the developer use in the code to meet these requirements?

- A. BatchGetItem
- B. GetItem
- C. Query
- D. Scan

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 265

A developer is building an application that gives users the ability to view bank account from multiple sources in a single dashboard. The developer has automated the process to retrieve API credentials for these sources.

The process invokes an AWS Lambda function that is associated with an AWS CloudFormation custom resource.

The developer wants a solution that will store the API credentials with minimal operational overhead.

Which solution will meet these requirements?

- A. Add an AWS Secrets Manager GenerateSecretString resource to the CloudFormation template. Set the value to reference new credentials to the CloudFormation resource.
- B. Use the AWS SDK ssm PutParameter operation in the Lambda function from the existing custom resource to store the credentials as a parameter. Set the parameter value to reference the new credentials. Set the parameter type to SecureString.
- C. Add an AWS Systems Manager Parameter Store resource to the CloudFormation template. Set the CloudFormation resource value to reference the new credentials. Set the resource NoEcho attribute to true.
- D. Use the AWS SDK ssm PutParameter operation in the Lambda function from the existing custom resources to store the credentials as a parameter. Set the parameter value to reference the new credentials. Set the parameter NoEcho attribute to true.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

The solution that will meet the requirements is to use the AWS SDK ssm PutParameter operation in the Lambda function from the existing custom resource to store the credentials as a parameter. Set the parameter value to reference the new credentials. Set the parameter type to SecureString. This way, the developer can store the API credentials with minimal operational overhead, as AWS Systems Manager Parameter Store provides secure and scalable storage for configuration data. The SecureString parameter type encrypts the parameter value with AWS Key Management Service (AWS KMS). The other options either involve adding additional resources to the CloudFormation template, which increases complexity and cost, or do not encrypt the parameter value, which reduces security.
