NEW QUESTION # 48

When you create a custom field, how do you define where the field is added?

- A. The field is added to a project header, identified by the templateClass ID
- B. The field is added to a class, identified by a class name
- C. Each field can be linked to multiple screens, identified via UI GroupClass ID
- D. The field is added to a class, identified by the record ID

Answer: B

Explanation:

In SAP Ariba, custom fields are associated with a specific class identified by its class name, such as ContractWorkspace or ProcureLineItem. This class-level association determines where the field is available within the application. When added to a parent class, the field inherits to all its subclasses, affecting all relevant data objects. The field is not linked via UI group IDs, project templates, or record IDs, which relate to different configuration aspects. This class-based design supports consistent data models and inheritance in SAP Ariba's architecture.

NEW QUESTION # 49

During a Bluefield migration, you discover missing flex master data templates. What do you do?

- A. Ignore them
- B. Rebuild them manually in production
- C. Use reporting workaround
- D. Defer to post-go-live

Answer: B

Explanation:

In a Bluefield deployment scenario, SAP Ariba requires that all Flex Master Data (FMD) templates and their associated data be present in the Production environment before migrating related configuration elements. If you find missing FMD templates during migration, the recommended approach is to manually recreate the missing templates in Production and load the relevant data. This is essential to maintain integrity because many custom fields depend on these templates, and missing templates can cause migration failures or broken references. Deferring or ignoring the issue risks operational disruptions and data inconsistencies. Reporting workarounds do not address template dependencies and therefore are ineffective. This aligns with SAP's guidance on master data migration within Bluefield scenarios to ensure successful, error-free deployments.
