NEW QUESTION # 478
Which of the following is PRIMARILY determined by asset classification?

- A. Priority for asset replacement
- B. Insurance coverage required for assets
- C. Replacement cost of assets
- D. Level of protection required for assets

Answer: D

Explanation:
Asset classification is the process of assigning a value to information assets based on their importance to the organization and the potential impact of their compromise, loss or damage1. Asset classification helps to determine the level of protection required for assets, which is proportional to their value and sensitivity2. Asset classification also facilitates risk assessment and management, as well as compliance with legal, regulatory and contractual requirements3. Asset classification does not primarily determine the insurance coverage, priority for replacement, or replacement cost of assets, as these factors depend on other criteria such as risk appetite, business impact, availability and market value4. Answer: A

Explanation:
Encryption would be the preferred method of ensuring confidentiality in customer communications with an e-commerce application. Strong passwords, by themselves, would not be sufficient since the data could still be intercepted, while two-factor authentication would be impractical. Digital signatures would not provide a secure means of communication. In most business-to-customer (Bto-C) web applications, a digital signature is also not a practical solution.
