NEW QUESTION # 56

Which of the following bones form the ball-and-socket joint of the upper extremity?

- A. Scapula, clavicle
- B. Humerus, clavicle
- C. Scapula, humerus
- D. Ribs, humerus

Answer: C

Explanation:

The ball-and-socket joint of the upper extremity is the shoulder joint. This joint is formed by the head of the humerus (the ball) fitting into the glenoid cavity of the scapula (the socket). This structure allows for a wide range of motion, including flexion, extension, abduction, adduction, and rotation. The ribs do not participate in this joint, and the clavicle connects the scapula to the sternum but does not form the ball-and-socket articulation. Understanding joint structure and function is important for anatomy questions on the NEX Science exam. The shoulder joint's design allows greater mobility than stability, which explains why shoulder dislocations are relatively common.
