NEW QUESTION # 119

A security architect receives reports of these incidents:

- An attacker exploits printers and medical devices in the organization to gain control of the network.
- An attacker disrupts operations through attacks on networked business infrastructure.

What is the next step to address these issues after discovery and classification of devices?

- A. Assess continuous security health monitoring
- B. Apply a context-based network access control policy
- C. Ensure trustworthiness of devices
- D. Enforce risk-based and adaptive access policies

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 120

Refer to the exhibit. An enterprise underwent a DoS attack sourced from the Internet on their web servers. Their existing firewall failed to handle the attack resulting in services being unavailable for several hours. The enterprise has decided to add a second firewall layer that will act as a back-end firewall. Both sets of firewalls will be set up to handle DoS attacks, so an identical situation is unlikely to happen again in the future. The current firewall hardware supports virtualization, meaning the same physical hardware can be used as both front-end and back-end firewall.

What provides an optimal solution to ensure highest level of security?

- A. Acquire a firewall from a different vendor and deploy as back-end firewalls.
- B. Use a single firewall as both front-end and back-end firewalls through virtualization.
- C. Deploy separate logical firewalls from different vendors as front-end and back-end firewalls.
- D. Procure an identical set of physical firewalls and deploy as back-end firewalls.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Using firewalls from different vendors in a layered design (defense in depth) avoids a single point of failure due to vendor-specific vulnerabilities or limitations. This ensures higher resilience and stronger protection against future DoS attacks compared to relying on the same hardware or virtualized instances of one vendor's firewall.

NEW QUESTION # 121

A healthcare customer requested that SNMP traps must be sent over the MPLS Layer 3 VPN service.

Which protocol must be enabled?

- A. Syslog
- B. Syslog TLS
- C. SSH
- D. SNMPv2
- E. SNMPv3

Answer: E

NEW QUESTION # 122

An enterprise wants to provide low-cost delivery of network systems that can be scaled on business demand, followed by an initiative to reduce capital expenses for new IT equipment. Which technology meets these goals?

- A. IaaS within an on-premises location
- B. PaaS within a public cloud
- C. SaaS within an on-premises location
- D. IaaS within a private cloud

Answer: D

Explanation:

* A (IaaS within a private cloud): IaaS allows on-demand scaling of compute and storage resources, and private cloud deployment reduces capital expenditures by pooling hardware resources and increasing utilization, while allowing control over security and compliance.

Other options explained:

* B: On-prem IaaS still requires significant CapEx.

* C: PaaS delivers platform services, but the scenario is focused on network systems.

* D: SaaS on-prem is uncommon and does not address infrastructure scaling.
