NEW QUESTION # 525

A team is having Issues With paper jams on a printer that the team shares With other teams. The team that IS having Issues prints legal-sized documents, and the other teams print letter-sized documents. Which of the following is most likely the issue?

- A. Multipage misfeed
- B. Tray settings
- C. Worn rollers
- D. Page orientation

Answer: B

Explanation:

The most likely issue is C. Tray settings.

Tray settings are the configuration options that tell the printer what type and size of paper is loaded in each tray. If the tray settings do not match the actual paper loaded, it can cause paper jams, misalignment, or incorrect printing. For example, if the printer expects letter-sized paper (8.5 x 11 inches) but the tray contains legal-sized paper (8.5 x 14 inches), the printer may try to pull more paper than it needs, resulting in a jam.

To fix this issue, the team should check and adjust the tray settings according to the paper they are using. They should also make sure that the paper is loaded correctly and not overfilled or mixed with different sizes or types of paper. Some printers have a manual feed option that allows users to select the paper size and type before printing, which can prevent paper jams from occurring.
