Snowflake SnowPro Advanced: Data Analyst Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q53-Q58):

NEW QUESTION # 53

What distinguishes exploratory ad-hoc analyses from routine analysis?

- A. Ad-hoc analyses explore patterns and anomalies beyond established routines.
- B. Ad-hoc analyses rely heavily on predefined queries.
- C. They involve querying known patterns without further exploration.
- D. Ad-hoc analyses focus solely on anomalies and established trends.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Ad-hoc analyses explore patterns and anomalies beyond established routines.

NEW QUESTION # 54

What role does leveraging native data types play in Snowflake while working with different datasets?

- A. Improves query performance and storage efficiency
- B. Limits data type conversion capabilities
- C. Reduces query flexibility and optimization possibilities
- D. Impedes data compatibility with other platforms

Answer: A

Explanation:

Using native data types in Snowflake enhances query performance and storage efficiency by optimizing data representation and storage structures.

NEW QUESTION # 55

When identifying and accessing relevant data from the Snowflake Marketplace, what challenges might arise in correlating external datasets with available data?

- A. Data format compatibility issues
- B. High data redundancy
- C. Limited external data sources
- D. Inability to access marketplace data

Answer: A

Explanation:

Correlating external datasets might face challenges due to data format compatibility issues between different sources.

NEW QUESTION # 56

You are loading data into a Snowflake table 'PRODUCT PRICES' using the COPY INTO command from a Parquet file stored in Azure Blob Storage. The 'PRODUCT PRICES' table has the following schema: VARCHAR, PRICE CURRENCY VARCHAR, LAST UPDATED TIMESTAMP NTZ. The Parquet file contains all these columns, but the 'LAST UPDATED' column is stored as a Unix epoch timestamp (seconds since 1970-01-01 00:00:00 UTC). You need to transform the Unix epoch timestamp to a Snowflake TIMESTAMP NTZ during the data load. Which of the following options correctly demonstrates how to achieve this using a transformation within the COPY INTO command?

- A. ☐
- B. ☐
- C. ☐
- D. ☒
- E. ☐

Answer: D

Explanation:

The correct answer is C. When using transformations with COPY INTO and an external stage, you must explicitly select the columns using '$1', '$2, etc. The gazure_stage/data.parquet' path is used in the 'FROM' clause, and converts the fourth column (LAST_UPDATED) from the Parquet file to a Snowflake TIMESTAMP. Note: It assumes column ordering in the Parquet file matches the order in the select statement. Using a SELECT statement within the FROM' clause is the correct approach when applying transformations directly during the COPY. The other options are incorrect because they either use the deprecated 'TRANSFORMATION' parameter (now replaced by select statements in the FROM clause) or attempt to apply transformations incorrectly. This is the only answer that is correct and will work. Options A, B, D, and E will all fail during the COPY INTO statement.

NEW QUESTION # 57

Which action is crucial for identifying demographics and relationships during diagnostic analysis?

(Select all that apply)

- A. Analyzing isolated anomalies without considering relationships
- B. Considering relationships among data variables
- C. Examining demographic variations linked to anomalies
- D. Ignoring statistical trends for focused analysis

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Analyzing demographic variations and considering relationships are crucial in identifying anomalies during diagnostic analysis.
