IBM MQ v9.4 Administrator - Professional Sample Questions (Q45-Q50):

NEW QUESTION # 45

A developer needs to implement a system where one application publishes event notifications such as "new order placed" and multiple subscribing applications (like billing, inventory, and shipping) independently consume those notifications without interfering with each other. Which IBM MQ feature should be used?

- A. Dead-letter queues
- B. Request/reply queues
- C. Point-to-point queue model
- D. Publish/subscribe with topics

Answer: D

Explanation:

Publish/subscribe in IBM MQ enables one-to-many message distribution where multiple subscribers receive event notifications independently.

NEW QUESTION # 46

When setting up IBM MQ in a cloud-native environment using containers and microservices, which configuration approach ensures high availability, message durability, and scalability while minimizing manual intervention for failover and load distribution?

- A. Using ephemeral queues on separate containers without clustering
- B. Configuring only point-to-point queues with in-memory persistence
- C. Deploying multiple queue manager instances in a container orchestration platform with clustered queues and persistent messaging
- D. Running a single queue manager instance in a container with periodic backups

Answer: C

Explanation:

Deploying multiple clustered queue manager instances with persistent messaging in a container orchestration platform ensures high availability, durability, and automatic load balancing for scalable cloud-native deployments.

NEW QUESTION # 47

In the context of IBM MQ security, which combination of mechanisms ensures that both the identity of the sending application is verified and the messages themselves are protected from unauthorized access during transmission?

- A. Message persistence ensures messages cannot be altered during transmission.
- B. Channel authentication records the sender identity, while SSL/TLS encryption ensures message confidentiality and integrity.
- C. Dead Letter Queues prevent unauthorized messages from being delivered.
- D. MQ clustering automatically encrypts messages and verifies user credentials.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Channel authentication combined with SSL/TLS encryption provides both sender verification and message security, which is essential for secure communication in MQ.

NEW QUESTION # 48

When multiple applications need to process the same incoming message independently without interfering with each other, which IBM MQ design ensures that each application receives a separate copy of the message and can process it at its own pace while maintaining overall system efficiency?

- A. Publish/Subscribe model with durable topic subscriptions
- B. Clustered local queues with round-robin distribution
- C. Point-to-point single queue processing
- D. Temporary queues with message duplication scripts

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Publish/Subscribe model allows multiple subscribers to get independent copies of messages. Durable subscriptions ensure messages are retained until each subscriber processes them, supporting independent application workflows.

NEW QUESTION # 49

In an enterprise integration scenario, if multiple applications produce messages to a queue and multiple consuming applications need to process these messages independently without affecting each other's processing, which IBM MQ pattern should be used to achieve this type of decoupled communication?

- A. Request/reply queues
- B. Publish/subscribe model
- C. Point-to-point queues
- D. Distributed transaction queues

Answer: B

Explanation:

The publish/subscribe model in IBM MQ allows multiple consumers to independently receive messages published to a topic, ensuring decoupled communication.
