NEW QUESTION # 156

A developer is trying to decide between creating a Visualforce component or a Lightning component for a custom screen. Which functionality consideration impacts the final decision?

- A. Does the screen need to be rendered as a PDF without using a thirdparty application?
- B. Will the screen be accessed via a mobile app?
- C. Does the screen need to be accessible from the Lightning Experience UI?
- D. Will the screen make use of a JavaScript framework?

Answer: A

Explanation:

Visualforce has a built-in feature to render a page as a PDF by using the `renderAs` attribute. This feature allows the developer to create PDF documents from Visualforce pages without using any third-party applications or libraries. Lightning components do not have this feature, and would require the use of external services or libraries to generate PDF documents from the component. Therefore, if the screen needs to be rendered as a PDF without using a third-party application, the developer should choose Visualforce over Lightning. NEW QUESTION # 157

```
@isTest static void testAccountUpdate() { Account acct = new Account({Name = 'Test'}); acct.Integration_Updated__c = false; insert acct; CalloutUtil.sendAccountUpdate(acct.Id); Account acctAfter = [SELECT Id, Integration_Updated__c FROM Account WHERE Id = :acct.Id] [0]; System.assert(true, acctAfter.Integration_Updated__c); }
```

The test method above calls a web service that updates an external system with Account information and sets the Account's `Integration_Updated__c` checkbox to True when it completes. The test fails to execute and exits with an error: "Methods defined as TestMethod do not support Web service callouts." What is the optimal way to fix this?
