- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

Correct:

* Create a price list with the associated products and services, and use this price list while creating an entitlement. Then, specify the discount percentage in the entitlement for each customer.

Create entitlements for work orders

Entitlements for work orders allow field service organizations to dynamically apply price lists and discounts to work order products and services based on work order attributes and date range factors.

Entitlements can be applied to work orders based on:

Billing account

Service account

Specific products and services

Specific customer assets

Customer asset categories

Incident types

Example scenarios for entitlements for work orders:

*-> Scenario 1: An organization wants to offer a customer a 10% discount for two years on all work order products and services based on a preset price list.

Scenario 2: An organization wants to offer a customer free work order products and services for two years for work orders that relate to customer assets of a specified category.

Incorrect:

* Create a warranty for each customer where you add the discounted prices on all products and services to the price list mentioned on the billing account and then specify the discount percentage.

* Create an agreement for each customer where you add the discounted prices on all products and services to the agreement price list. The discounted prices will be reflected on all work orders generated.
