問題 #613

Which of the following is the most likely to use NTFS as the native filesystem?

- A. Linux
- B. Android
- C. Windows
- D. macOS

答案： C

解題說明：

NTFS stands for New Technology File System, which is a proprietary file system developed by Microsoft<sup>4</sup>. NTFS is the default file system for the Windows NT family of operating systems, which includes Windows 10, Windows Server 2019, and other versions<sup>5</sup>. NTFS provides features such as security, encryption, compression, journaling, and large volume support<sup>45</sup>. NTFS is not the native file system for other operating systems, such as macOS, Linux, or Android, although some of them can read or write to NTFS volumes with third-party drivers or tools

問題 #614

A systems administrator is configuring centralized desktop management for computers on a domain. The management team has decided that all users' workstations should have the same network drives, printers, and configurations. Which of the following should the administrator use to accomplish this task?

- A. net use
- B. User Accounts
- C. Network and Sharing Center
- D. regedit
- E. Group Policy

答案： E

解題說明：

Explanation

Group Policy is a feature of Windows that allows administrators to centrally manage and apply policies and settings to computers and users on a domain<sup>3</sup>. Group Policy can be used to configure network drives, printers, security settings, desktop preferences, and other configurations for all users' workstations<sup>3</sup>. Network and Sharing Center, net use, User Accounts, and regedit are not tools that can accomplish this task.

問題 #615

A user has been unable to receive emails or browse the internet from a smartphone while traveling. However, text messages and phone calls are working without issue. Which of the following should a support technician check FIRST?

- A. Data plan coverage
- B. User account status
- C. Mobile OS version
- D. Network traffic outages

答案： A

解題說明：

The first thing that a support technician should check to resolve the issue of not being able to receive emails or browse the internet from a smartphone while traveling is the data plan coverage. The data plan coverage determines how much data and where the user can use on the smartphone's cellular network. The data plan coverage may vary depending on the user's location, carrier and subscription. The data plan coverage may not include or support certain areas or countries that the user is traveling to, or may charge extra fees or limit the speed or amount of data that the user can use. The data plan coverage does not affect text messages and phone calls, which use different network services and protocols. User account status is not likely to cause the issue of not being able to receive emails or browse the internet from a smartphone while traveling, unless the user account has been suspended or terminated by the carrier or the email provider. Mobile OS version is not likely to cause the issue of not being able to receive emails or browse the internet from a smartphone while traveling, unless the mobile OS has a major bug or compatibility problem with the network or the email app. Network traffic outages may cause the issue of not being able to receive emails or browse the internet from a smartphone while traveling, but they are less likely and less common than data plan coverage issues, and they should also affect text messages and phone calls. #### 問題 #617

A user wants to set up speech recognition on a PC. In which of the following Windows Settings tools can the user enable this option?

- A. System
- B. Personalization
- C. Ease of Access
- D. Language

答案： C

解題說明：

The user can enable speech recognition on a PC in the Ease of Access settings tool. To set up Speech Recognition on a Windows PC, the user should open Control Panel, click on Ease of Access, click on Speech Recognition, and click the Start Speech Recognition link. Language settings can be used to change the language of the speech recognition feature, but they will not enable the feature. System settings can be used to configure the hardware and software of the PC, but they will not enable the speech recognition feature. Personalization settings can be used to customize the appearance and behavior of the PC, but they will not enable the speech recognition feature. Open up ease of access, click on speech, then there is an on and off button for speech recognition.
