NEW QUESTION # 16

In an Event-Driven Architecture (EDA), which architectural characteristic best limits the propagation of failure from one service to another?

- A. Loose coupling between services minimizes cascading failures.
- B. Centralized logging facilitates rapid failure identification.
- C. Asynchronous communication buffers immediate failure impact.
- D. Robust error handling prevents service disruption.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Event-Driven Architecture, resilience is ensured by:

Loose coupling # Services do not depend on each other's runtime availability. A failure in one service does not directly impact others.

This design minimizes cascading failures that can occur in tightly coupled systems.

Asynchronous communication and error handling help further, but loose coupling is the fundamental characteristic that limits failure propagation.

Incorrect options:

A # Robust error handling is important but not the main architectural limiter of cascading failures.

C # Centralized logging helps with troubleshooting, not failure prevention.

D # Asynchronous buffering mitigates impact but loose coupling fundamentally prevents direct propagation.

NEW QUESTION # 17

You have created a product based on an API proxy, but you have not published the product yet. What is a consequence?

- A. The product is displayed in the API Business Hub Enterprise but is grayed out.
- B. The product is not displayed in the API Business Hub Enterprise.
- C. The product is displayed in the API Business Hub Enterprise with the note "not published".

Answer: B

Explanation:

In API Management (part of SAP Integration Suite), when you create an API Product (which bundles API Proxies for consumption):

Publishing is required before it becomes visible in API Business Hub Enterprise (Developer Portal).

If the product is not yet published, it remains in the design-time environment and is invisible to app developers.

Only published products are available for subscription and discovery.

Other options:

The product will not be shown grayed out or with a "not published" note; it simply won't be visible at all in the Business Hub

Enterprise.
