NEW QUESTION # 266

What are three practices of Extreme Programming (XP)? (Choose three.) You have reached the max number of allowed answers

- A. Pair programming
- B. Intentional architecture
- C. Behavior-driven development
- D. Deployment automation
- E. Continuous Integration
- F. Test-driven development

Answer: A,E,F

Explanation:

Test-driven development (TDD) is a practice of writing automated tests before writing the production code, and then refactoring the code to make it pass the tests. TDD helps ensure that the code is correct, maintainable, and meets the requirements. Pair programming is a practice of having two programmers work together on the same code, one as the driver who writes the code, and the other as the navigator who reviews the code and provides feedback. Pair programming helps improve the quality of the code, share knowledge, and reduce defects. Continuous Integration (CI) is a practice of integrating and testing the code frequently, usually several times a day, using automated tools. CI helps detect and fix errors early, improve collaboration, and deliver faster.

NEW QUESTION # 267

What is critical to improving flow?

- A. Frequent context switching
- B. Increase work in process (WIP) limits
- C. Reduce the batch sizes of work
- D. Address the local problems

Answer: C

Explanation:

Reducing the batch sizes of work is critical to improving flow, as it enables faster delivery of value, lower risk, higher quality, and better feedback<sup>1</sup>. Batch size is the amount of work that moves as a unit through the value stream<sup>2</sup>. Smaller batches reduce the cycle time, the total time from the beginning to the end of the process to provide value to a customer<sup>3</sup>. Smaller batches also reduce the variability and uncertainty in the system, leading to less waste and rework<sup>2</sup>. SAFe provides several practices to reduce the batch sizes of work, such as using User Stories, Features, and Minimum Viable Products (MVPs) as units of work, applying Continuous Integration (CI) and Continuous Delivery (CD) pipelines, and limiting Work in Process (WIP)

NEW QUESTION # 268

What is one key component of a Feature?

- A. Benefit hypothesis
- B. Release plan
- C. Business plan
- D. Key stakeholders

Answer: A

Explanation:

A Feature is a service that fulfills a stakeholder need and delivers business value. One key component of a Feature is the benefit hypothesis, which is a statement that describes the expected outcome and value of the Feature for the end user or the business<sup>1</sup>. The benefit hypothesis helps to define the scope, priority, and acceptance criteria of the Feature, and to measure its impact and effectiveness after implementation<sup>2</sup>. The benefit hypothesis also supports the Lean UX process model, which includes a definition of the Minimum Marketable Feature (MMF), a benefit hypothesis, and acceptance criteria<sup>3</sup>. The other options are not key components of a Feature, although they may be related to it. A business plan is a document that outlines the goals, strategies, and financial projections of a business or a product, and it may include some features, but it is not a component of a Feature. Key stakeholders are the people or groups who have an interest or influence in the product or the Feature, and they may provide input or feedback, but they are not a component of a Feature. A release plan is a schedule that shows when the product or the Feature will be delivered to the customers or users, and it may depend on the Feature, but it is not a component of a Feature.
