IIA Business Knowledge for Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q435-Q440):

NEW QUESTION # 435

A chief audit executive (CAE) joined an organization in the middle of the financial year. A risk-based annual audit plan has been approved by the board and is already underway. However, after discussions with key stakeholders, the CAE realizes that some significant key risk areas have not been covered in the original audit plan. How should the CAE respond?

- A. Commit to delivering the original annual audit plan as it has already been approved by the board
- B. Ensure that the newly identified risks are included in the next year's annual audit plan
- C. Assign internal auditors to immediately perform assurance engagements in the areas where the new risks have been identified, due to their significance
- D. Revise the plan to incorporate the newly identified risks, and communicate significant interim changes to senior management and the board for review and approval

Answer: D

Explanation:

The IIA Standards emphasize that the internal audit plan must remain dynamic and responsive to changes in risks and priorities. If significant risks are identified after the plan has been approved, the CAE must revise the plan and communicate the interim changes to senior management and the board for review and approval.

Option A ignores emerging risks. Option C delays addressing significant risks. Option D bypasses governance approval and does not respect the board's oversight role.

- A. Vertical integration.
- B. Focus.
- C. Differentiation.
- D. Unrelated diversification.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 438

A bank has changed from a system in which lines are formed in front of each teller to a one-line, multiple-server system. When a teller is free, the person at the head of the line goes to that teller. Implementing the new system will:

- A. Improve on-the-job training for tellers because each will perform different duties.
- B. Decrease time customers spend in the line.
- C. Decrease the bank's wage expenses because the new system uses fewer tellers.
- D. Increase accuracy in teller reconciliations at the end of the day because fewer customers are served by each teller.

Answer: B

When all customers must wait in a single queue, a decrease in waiting time is possible given multiple servers. An added effect is to increase customer satisfaction.

When a new application is being created for widespread use in a large organization, the principal liaison between the IT function and the rest of an organization is normally a(n):

- Systems analysts are specifically qualified to analyze and design computer information systems. They survey the existing system, analyze the organization's information requirements, and design new systems to meet those needs.
