NEW QUESTION # 133

A customer must protect an ONTAP Select cluster at remote locations. They have a very limited network connection between sites for 30 remote locations and the data center. They want to be able to recover a remote site with an RPO of 60 minutes. In this scenario, which solution accomplishes this task?

- A. SnapVault
- B. FlexClone
- C. SnapMirror Synchronous
- D. MetroCluster

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 134

Your customer replicates between two on-premises NetApp ONTAP clusters with an hourly schedule. Two days ago they made network changes, and nobody checked the ONTAP clusters. Today they notice a SnapMirror replication lag time of two days. To avoid this happening again, they want to receive an email alert if the replication lag time will be more than 1.5 hours. Which NetApp tool can send a lag threshold alert?

- A. Active IQ OneCollect
- B. ONTAP System Manager
- C. Active IQ Config Advisor
- D. Active IQ Unified Manager

Answer: D

Explanation:

Active IQ Unified Manager can monitor SnapMirror relationships and generate email alerts based on lag threshold policies. You can configure it to trigger an alert when the replication lag exceeds 1.5 hours, helping prevent unnoticed replication issues.

NEW QUESTION # 135

A company is using SnapMirror SVM replication, with identity preserve set to false to protect an SMB-only dataset in case of a disaster.

What needs to be manually configured to allow SMB to have access to the data on the destination?

- A. SMB shares
- B. SMB server
- C. home directories

- D. name mappings

Answer: A

Explanation:

When SnapMirror SVM replication is configured with identity-preserve=false, network and protocol configurations (like SMB shares) are not replicated. Therefore, to allow SMB access on the destination SVM, you must manually create SMB shares on the destination after replication is initialized.
