問題 #196

Your organization uses a change advisory board (CAB) to approve all changes to an existing service You want to revise this process to eliminate any negative impact on the software delivery performance What should you do?

Choose 2 answers

- A. Batch changes into larger but less frequent software releases
- B. Let developers merge their own changes but ensure that the team's deployment platform can roll back changes if any issues are discovered
- C. Ensure that the team's development platform enables developers to get fast feedback on the impact of their changes
- D. Replace the CAB with a senior manager to ensure continuous oversight from development to deployment
- E. Move to a peer-review based process for individual changes that is enforced at code check-in time and supported by automated tests

答案: C,E

問題 #197

You support a user-facing web application When analyzing the application's error budget over the previous six months you notice that the application never consumed more than 5% of its error budget You hold a SLO review with business stakeholders and confirm that the SLO is set appropriately You want your application's reliability to more closely reflect its SLO What steps can you take to further that goal while balancing velocity, reliability, and business needs?

Choose 2 answers

- A. Have more frequent or potentially risky application releases
- B. Announce planned downtime to consume more error budget and ensure that users are not depending on a tighter SLO
- C. Add more serving capacity to all of your application's zones
- D. Implement and measure all other available SLIs for the application
- E. Tighten the SLO to match the application's observed reliability

答案: A,E

解題說明:

The best options for furthering your application's reliability goal while balancing velocity, reliability, and business needs are to have more frequent or potentially risky application releases and to tighten the SLO to match the application's observed reliability. Having more frequent or potentially risky application releases can help you increase the change velocity and deliver new features faster. However, this also increases the likelihood of consuming more error budget and reducing the reliability of your service. Therefore, you should monitor your error budget consumption and adjust your release policies accordingly. For example, you can freeze or slow down releases when the error budget is low, or accelerate releases when the error budget is high. Tightening the SLO to match the application's observed reliability can help you align your service quality with your users' expectations and business needs. However, this also means that you have less room for error and need to maintain a higher level of reliability. Therefore, you should ensure that your SLO is realistic and achievable, and that you have sufficient engineering resources and processes to meet it.

問題 #198

You support an application running on GCP and want to configure SMS notifications to your team for the most critical alerts in Stackdriver Monitoring. You have already identified the alerting policies you want to configure this for. What should you do?

- A. Ensure that your team members set their SMS/phone numbers in their Stackdriver Profile. Select the SMS notification option for each alerting policy and then select the appropriate SMS/phone numbers from the list.
- B. Configure a Slack notification for each alerting policy. Set up a Slack-to-SMS integration to send SMS messages when Slack messages are received. Ensure that your team members add their SMS/phone numbers to the external integration.
- C. Select the Webhook notifications option for each alerting policy, and configure it to use a third-party integration tool. Ensure that your team members add their SMS/phone numbers to the external tool.
- D. Download and configure a third-party integration between Stackdriver Monitoring and an SMS gateway. Ensure that your team members add their SMS/phone numbers to the external tool.

答案: B

Your team is designing a new application for deployment both inside and outside Google Cloud Platform (GCP). You need to collect detailed metrics such as system resource utilization. You want to use centralized GCP services while minimizing the amount of work required to set up this collection system. What should you do?

- A. Install an Application Performance Monitoring (APM) tool in both locations, and configure an export to a central data storage location for analysis.
- B. Import the Stackdriver Debugger package, and configure the application to emit debug messages with timing information.
- C. Import the Stackdriver Profiler package, and configure it to relay function timing data to Stackdriver for further analysis.
- D. Instrument the code using a timing library, and publish the metrics via a health check endpoint that is scraped by Stackdriver.

答案： A

問題 #200

Your applications performance in Google Cloud has degraded since the last release You suspect that downstream dependencies might be causing some requests to take longer to complete You need to investigate the issue with your application to determine the cause What should you do?

- A. Configure Error Reporting in your application
- B. Configure Cloud Trace in your application
- C. Configure Google Cloud Managed Service for Prometheus in your application
- D. Configure Cloud Profiler in your application

答案： B

解題說明：

The best option for investigating the issue with your application's performance in Google Cloud is to configure Cloud Trace in your application. Cloud Trace is a service that allows you to collect and analyze latency data from your application. You can use Cloud Trace to trace requests across different components of your application, such as downstream dependencies, and identify where they take longer to complete. You can also use Cloud Trace to compare latency data across different versions of your application, and detect any performance degradation or improvement. By using Cloud Trace, you can diagnose and troubleshoot performance issues with your application in Google Cloud.
