AHIMA Certified Documentation Integrity Practitioner Sample Questions (Q132-Q137):

NEW QUESTION # 132

Which of the following indicates a noncompliant multiple-choice query? One that does NOT

- A. include the option of "unable to determine"
- B. list options in alphabetical order
- C. include at least four options
- D. allow the provider to add their own response

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

A noncompliant multiple-choice query is one that does not include at least four options because it may limit the provider's choice and suggest a preferred answer. A compliant multiple-choice query should include at least four options that are clinically significant, reasonable, and plausible based on the clinical indicators and documentation in the health record. The options should also be listed in alphabetical order to avoid any bias or preference. A compliant multiple-choice query should also allow the provider to add their own response if none of the options are appropriate, and include the option of "unable to determine" if the provider cannot make a definitive diagnosis based on the available information. NEW QUESTION # 133

The clinical documentation integrity practitioner (CDIP) performed a verbal query and then later neglected following up with the provider. How should the CDIP avoid a compliance risk for this follow up failure according to AHIMA's Guidelines for Achieving a Compliant Query Practice?

- A. Complete the documentation at the end of the day when entering cases reviewed
- B. Complete the documentation immediately after the provider's response
- C. Complete the documentation at the time of discussion or immediately following
- D. Complete the documentation when there is a provider agreement

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

According to AHIMA's Guidelines for Achieving a Compliant Query Practice, the clinical documentation integrity practitioner (CDIP) should complete the documentation at the time of discussion or immediately following to avoid a compliance risk for this follow up failure. This is because verbal queries are considered part of the health record and must be documented in a timely and accurate manner to reflect the provider's response and any changes in documentation or coding. Completing the documentation later or only when there is an agreement may result in errors, omissions, inconsistencies, or delays that may affect the quality and integrity of the health record and the query process. NEW QUESTION # 134

A patient has a history of asthma and presents with complaints of fever, cough, general body aches, and lethargy. The patient's child was recently diagnosed with influenza. Wheezing is heard on exam. The physician documents the diagnosis as asthma exacerbation and orders nebulizer treatments of Albuterol and a 5-day course of oral Prednisone. The clinical documentation integrity practitioner (CDIP) is unsure which signs and symptoms are inherent to asthma. Which reference resource should be used to obtain this information?

- A. AMA CPT Assistant
- B. Medical Dictionary

- C. The Merck Manual
- D. Physician's Desk Reference

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The reference resource that should be used to obtain information about the signs and symptoms that are inherent to asthma is The Merck Manual. This is a comprehensive medical reference that covers various topics related to diseases, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention. The Merck Manual provides a detailed description of asthma, including its causes, risk factors, pathophysiology, clinical features, diagnosis, management, and complications. According to The Merck Manual, the signs and symptoms that are inherent to asthma are wheezing, coughing, chest tightness, and dyspnea (shortness of breath) 2. These symptoms are caused by the reversible bronchoconstriction and inflammation of the airways that characterize asthma. The Merck Manual also explains how these symptoms can be triggered or exacerbated by various factors, such as allergens, infections, exercise, cold air, stress, or medications 2.

Reviewing and analyzing physician query content on a regular basis

- A. aids in discussion between physician and reviewer
- B. assists in identifying gaps in skills and knowledge
- C. helps to calculate query response rate
- D. facilitates physician data collection

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Reviewing and analyzing physician query content on a regular basis assists in identifying gaps in skills and knowledge of the clinical documentation integrity practitioners (CDIPs) and the providers. By evaluating the quality, accuracy, appropriateness, and effectiveness of the queries, the CDIPs can identify areas of improvement, education, and feedback for themselves and the providers. Reviewing and analyzing physician query content can also help to ensure compliance with industry standards and best practices, as well as to monitor query outcomes and trends 2 References: 1:
