NEW QUESTION # 193

According to Silk and Vogel's research, which of the following is one of the ways that businesses rationalize illegal conduct?

- A. Violations are caused by innocent errors in judgment rather than economic necessity.
- B. Government regulations are justified because the additional costs of regulations and bureaucratic procedures increase government profits.
- C. Government regulation is unnecessary because the matters being regulated are unimportant.
- D. Corporate violations that involve large sums of money are often spread among so many organizations that each gains very little individually.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed in Depth Explanation:

Silk and Vogel's research found that organizations often rationalize unethical or illegal behavior by diffusing responsibility across a group, thus minimizing perceived individual culpability. This "shared guilt" justification is reflected in option D. The other options either misunderstand the research or do not reflect actual rationalizations used in white-collar crime contexts.
