NEW QUESTION # 79

What is the current thinking on the practice of maintaining a petty cash fund?

- A. Three separate individuals should sign off on disbursements
- B. It's practically obsolete and should be eliminated, if possible
- C. It's considered a best practice within service organizations and consulting businesses
- D. It should be maintained by an executive in the treasury department

Answer: B

Explanation:

The current thinking on maintaining a petty cash fund is that it is practically obsolete and should be eliminated, if possible, due to the availability of more efficient and secure alternatives, such as payment cards or electronic reimbursements. Petty cash funds are prone to mismanagement, theft, and lack of oversight, and modern AP practices favor digital solutions for small transactions.

The web source from SAP Concur states: "Petty cash funds are increasingly considered obsolete, as payment cards and electronic reimbursements offer more secure and trackable alternatives for small transactions." This directly supports Option A. The other options are incorrect:

- * Option B: Requiring three individuals to sign off is excessive and not a standard practice.
- * Option C: Petty cash is not considered a best practice, even in service or consulting businesses.
- * Option D: Petty cash is typically managed by AP or administrative staff, not treasury executives.

The IOFM APS Certification Program covers "Internal Controls," including best practices for managing small transactions. The curriculum's focus on "peer-tested best practices" aligns with the trend toward eliminating petty cash in favor of modern payment methods.

NEW QUESTION # 80

IRS proposed penalties for missing or incorrect tax IDs on 1099 filings can be abated due to 'reasonable cause,' which can include each of the following EXCEPT:

- A. Documentation showing the error rate to be less than 5% of total 1099s
- B. The organization's plan for improving the accuracy of future reporting
- C. Proof of a successful TIN match prior to the date of assessment
- D. Steps the organization has taken in an attempt to obtain the correct payee information

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Tax and Regulatory Compliance topic in the IOFM APS Certification Program covers IRS penalties for 1099 filings and the criteria for penalty abatement under 'reasonable cause.' Reasonable cause can be established by demonstrating due diligence, such as obtaining a TIN match, documenting efforts to collect correct payee information, or outlining plans to improve future reporting. However, an error rate less than 5% is not a recognized IRS criterion for reasonable cause, as the IRS focuses on intent and effort, not specific error thresholds.

* Option A (Proof of a successful TIN match prior to the date of assessment): Valid. A TIN match with the IRS verifies payee information, demonstrating due diligence, which supports reasonable cause for abatement.

* Option B (Documentation showing the error rate to be less than 5% of total 1099s): Not valid. The IRS does not specify a percentage threshold (e.g., 5%) for penalty abatement. Reasonable cause depends on actions taken, not error rates. Correct answer.

* Option C (The organization's plan for improving the accuracy of future reporting): Valid. A documented plan to enhance compliance (e.g., improved TIN collection processes) shows intent to correct issues, supporting reasonable cause.

* Option D (Steps the organization has taken in an attempt to obtain the correct payee information)

* Valid. Documenting efforts like requesting W-9 forms or sending B Notices demonstrates due diligence, a key factor for reasonable cause.

Reference to IOFM APS Documents: The APS e-textbook under Tax and Regulatory Compliance states, "IRS penalties for incorrect 1099 filings can be abated for reasonable cause, including proof of TIN matching, efforts to obtain correct payee data, and plans for future compliance." The Master Guide to Form 1099 Compliance clarifies, "Reasonable cause does not include specific error rate thresholds like 5%; instead, it focuses on documented due diligence." The training video reinforces this, noting that "TIN matches and W-9 solicitations are key to penalty abatement."

NEW QUESTION # 81

Which of the following IRS documents addresses travel & entertainment (T&E) expenses?

- A. Notice 1009
- B. Advisory 972
- C. Form 1046
- D. Publication 463

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Publication 463, titled "Travel, Gift, and Car Expenses," is the primary document that addresses travel and entertainment (T&E) expenses. It provides detailed guidance on what qualifies as deductible business travel, entertainment, and related expenses, including rules for substantiation, accountable plans, and per diem rates.

The web source from the IRS states: "Publication 463, Travel, Gift, and Car Expenses, explains what expenses are deductible, how to report them, and the rules for an accountable plan." This directly supports Option B. The other options are incorrect:

- * Notice 1009 (A) does not exist in the context of T&E expenses.
- * Advisory 972 (C) is not a recognized IRS document.
- * Form 1046 (D) is not related to T&E; IRS forms like 1040 or 1099 are unrelated.

The IOFM APS Certification Program covers "Tax and Regulatory Compliance," including IRS guidelines for T&E expenses. The curriculum's focus on "peer-tested best practices" emphasizes familiarity with Publication 463 for compliance with T&E reporting requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 82

What is one benefit of entering a commodity code in a user-defined field when setting up a new vendor?

- A. It automatically generates a price comparison to other similar vendors
- B. It enables procurement to use the data for spend analysis
- C. It indicates which team member created the new record
- D. It prevents a duplicate vendor from being entered

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Vendor Master File topic in the IOFM APS Certification Program emphasizes the importance of structured data in the vendor master file (VMF) to support organizational processes. Entering a commodity code (a standardized code classifying goods or services) in a user-defined field allows procurement to categorize vendor offerings, enabling spend analysis to identify spending patterns, negotiate better terms, and optimize supplier selection.

* Option A (It prevents a duplicate vendor from being entered): Incorrect. Commodity codes classify goods/services, not vendor identities; duplicate prevention relies on TIN or name checks.

* Option B (It indicates which team member created the new record): Incorrect. Commodity codes are unrelated to record creation metadata, which is tracked separately.

* Option C (It automatically generates a price comparison to other similar vendors): Incorrect.

Commodity codes enable categorization but do not automatically generate price comparisons; additional tools are needed.

* Option D (It enables procurement to use the data for spend analysis): Correct. Commodity codes allow procurement to group vendors by product/service type, facilitating spend analysis and strategic sourcing.

Reference to IOFM APS Documents: The APS e-textbook under Vendor Master File states, "Entering commodity codes in the vendor master file enables procurement to perform spend analysis by categorizing vendor goods and services." The training video notes, "Commodity codes support procurement's ability to analyze spending patterns, a key benefit of structured VMF data."

NEW QUESTION # 83

Which of the following best describes ERP systems?

- A. They link together business functions with real-time data flow
- B. They are popular methods of tracking continuous improvement

- C. They are payment systems designed exclusively for cryptocurrency
- D. They provide a sophisticated means of fraud detection

Answer: A

Explanation:

Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) systems are integrated software platforms that link various business functions—such as accounting, procurement, accounts payable, inventory, and human resources—through a centralized database, enabling real-time data flow and streamlined operations. ERP systems enhance efficiency by providing a unified view of business processes, but they are not primarily for tracking continuous improvement (Option A), fraud detection (Option B), or cryptocurrency payments (Option D). The web source from NetSuite states: "ERP systems integrate business functions, such as finance, procurement, and HR, with real-time data flow to improve efficiency and decision-making." This directly supports Option C, emphasizing the role of ERP in linking business functions with real-time data.

The IOFM APS Certification Program covers "Technology and Automation," including the role of ERP systems in accounts payable processes. The curriculum's focus on "peer-tested best practices" aligns with the definition of ERP systems as integrative platforms for real-time data management.
