- A. Write a class that extends HTTPCalloutMock.

NEW QUESTION # 139

Provide question feedback here (optional):

```

Boolean isOK;
integer x;
String theString = 'Hello';

if (isOK == false && theString == 'Hello'){
    x = 1;
} else if (isOK == true && theString == 'Hello') {
    x = 2;
} else if (isOK != null && theString == 'Hello'){
    x = 3;
} else {
    x = 4;
}

```

Based on this code, what is the value of x?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: C

Explanation:

The variable isOK is declared but not initialized, so its value is null. The if-else conditions check for specific values of isOK (true or false), but since it is null, none of those conditions are satisfied. The program defaults to the else block, assigning 4 to x.

NEW QUESTION # 140

Since Aura application events follow the traditional publish- subscribe model, which method is used to fire an event?

- A. fire()
- B. registerEvent
- C. fireEvent ()
- D. emit()

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Aura Components, application events are fired by invoking the fire() method on the event instance.

Option D: fire()

Correct.

To fire an application event, you first get the event instance using cmp.getEvent("eventName") and then call fire() on it.

Example:

```
var appEvent = $A.get("e.namespace:eventName");
appEvent.setParams({ "param1" : value1 });
appEvent.fire();
```

registerEvent is used in the component markup to declare that the component can fire or handle an event.

It is not a method used to fire an event.

There is no fireEvent() method in the Aura framework.

The correct method to fire an event is fire().

Option C: emit()

Incorrect.

emit() is not a method used in Aura components.

This method is commonly used in other frameworks but not in Aura.

Conclusion:

The method used to fire an Aura application event is fire(), which is option D.
