material deterioration, loss of containment

NEW QUESTION # 47

A most common indicator in consequence analysis is:

- A. number of injuries.
- B. environmental damage.
- C. affected area.
- D. cost of loss.

Answer: D

Explanation:
According to API 580 Section 10.3.3:
"Cost is commonly used as an indicator of potential consequences. Consequence may be expressed in relative monetary units (e.g. dollars)... This will permit adding the different consequences of a single event and facilitate comparisons of risk from one process unit to another." Cost can represent multiple consequence dimensions, including production loss, emergency response, equipment damage, fines, and more. This method enables direct comparison of diverse consequence types on a unified basis, making it the most commonly applied indicator in practice.
