Several times a day, the performance of all warehouse queries degrades. You suspect that Fabric is throttling the compute used by the warehouse.

What should you use to identify whether throttling is occurring?

- A. the Microsoft Fabric Capacity Metrics app
- B. the Capacity settings
- C. dynamic management views (DMVs)
- D. the Monitoring hub

Answer: A

Reference = The use of the Monitoring hub for performance management and troubleshooting is detailed in the Azure Synapse Analytics documentation.

NEW QUESTION # 115

You have a semantic model named Model1. Model1 contains five tables that all use Import mode. Model1 contains a dynamic row-level security (RLS) role named HR. The HR role filters employee data so that HR managers only see the data of the department to which they are assigned.

You publish Model1 to a Fabric tenant and configure RLS role membership. You share the model and related reports to users.

An HR manager reports that the data they see in a report is incomplete.

What should you do to validate the data seen by the HR Manager?

- A. Filter the data in the report to match the intended logic of the filter for the HR department.
- B. Select Test as role to view the data as the HR role.
- C. Ask the HR manager to open the report in Microsoft Power BI Desktop.
- D. Select Test as role to view the report as the HR manager,

Answer: B

Explanation:

To validate the data seen by the HR manager, you should use the 'Test as role' feature in Power BI service.

This allows you to see the data exactly as it would appear for the HR role, considering the dynamic RLS setup. Here is how you would proceed:

- * Navigate to the Power BI service and locate Model1.
- * Access the dataset settings for Model1.
- * Find the security/RLS settings where you configured the roles.
- * Use the 'Test as role' feature to simulate the report viewing experience as the HR role.
- * Review the data and the filters applied to ensure that the RLS is functioning correctly.
- * If discrepancies are found, adjust the RLS expressions or the role membership as needed.

References: The 'Test as role' feature and its use for validating RLS in Power BI is covered in the Power BI documentation available on Microsoft's official documentation.
