NEW QUESTION # 53

SCENARIO - Please use the following to answer the next question:

Clean-Q is a company that offers house-hold and office cleaning services. The company receives requests from consumers via their website and telephor, to book cleaning services. Based on the type and size of service, Clean-Q then contracts individuals that are registered on its resource database - currently managed in-house by Clean-Q IT Support. Because of Clean-Q's business model, resources are contracted as needed instead of permanently employed.

The table below indicates some of the personal information Clean-Q requires as part of its business operations:

Category	Types of Personal Information
Customers	Name, address (location), contact information, billing information
Resources (contracted)	Name, contact information, banking details, address

Clean-Q has an internal employee base of about 30 people. A recent privacy compliance exercise has been conducted to align employee data management and human resource functions with applicable data protection regulation.

Therefore, the Clean-Q permanent employee base is not included as part of this scenario.

With an increase in construction work and housing developments, Clean-Q has had an influx of requests for cleaning services. The demand has overwhelmed Clean-Q's traditional supply and demand system that has caused some overlapping bookings.

In a business strategy session held by senior management recently, Clean-Q invited vendors to present potential solutions to their current operational issues. These vendors included Application development and Cloud solution providers, presenting their proposed solution and platforms.

The Managing Director opted to initiate the process to integrate Clean-Q's operations with a cloud solution (LeadOps) that will provide the following solution on a single online platform. A web interface that Clean-Q accesses for the purposes of resource and customer management. This would entail uploading resource and customer information.

A customer facing web interface that enables customers to register, manage and submit cleaning service requests online.

A resource facing web interface that enables resources to apply and manage their assigned jobs.

An online payment facility for customer to pay for services.

Considering that LeadOps will host/process personal information on behalf of Clean-Q remotely, what is an appropriate next step for Clean-Q senior management to assess LeadOps' appropriateness?

- A. Determine if any Clean-Q competitors currently use LeadOps as a solution.
- B. Obtain a legal opinion from an external law firm on contracts management.
- C. Nothing at this stage as the Managing Director has made a decision.
- D. Involve the Information Security team to understand in more detail the types of services and solutions LeadOps is proposing.
