ISC Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP) Sample Questions (Q905-Q910):

NEW QUESTION # 905

In biometrics, a one-to-one search to verify an individual's claim of an identity is called:

- A. Audit trail review.
- B. Authentication.
- C. Accountability.
- D. Aggregation.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is Authentication. Answer "Audit trail review." is a review of audit system data, usually done after the fact. Answer "Accountability" is holding individuals responsible for their actions, and answer d is obtaining higher-sensitivity information from a number of pieces of information of lower sensitivity.

NEW QUESTION # 906

Clothing retailer employees are provisioned with user accounts that provide access to resources at partner businesses. All partner businesses use common identity and access management (IAM) protocols and differing technologies. Under the Extended Identity principle, what is the process flow between partner businesses to allow this TAM action?

- A. Clothing retailer acts as Service Provider, confirms identity of user using industry standards, then sends credentials to partner businesses that act as an identity provider (IdP) and allows access to resources.
- B. Clothing retailer acts as identity provider (IdP), confirms identity of user using industry standards, then sends credentials to partner businesses that act as a Service Provider and allows access to services.
- C. Clothing retailer acts as Access Control Provider, confirms access of user using industry standards, then sends credentials to partner businesses that act as a Service Provider and allows access to resources.
- D. Clothing retailer acts as User Self Service, confirms identity of user using industry standards, then sends credentials to partner businesses that act as a Service Provider and allows access to services.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Extended Identity principle is a concept that describes how an organization can extend its identity and access management (IAM) capabilities to external entities, such as customers, partners, or suppliers, by using common standards and protocols, such as SAML, OAuth, or OpenID Connect. Under this principle, the clothing retailer acts as an identity provider (IdP), which is the entity that authenticates and verifies the identity of the user using industry standards, such as passwords, tokens, or biometrics. The partner businesses act as service providers (SPs), which are the entities that provide access to the resources or services that the user requests, such as inventory, shipping, or payment. The clothing retailer sends the credentials of the user, such as a SAML assertion or an OAuth token, to the partner businesses, which use them to grant access to the user. This way, the user does not need to create or manage multiple accounts or passwords for each partner business, and the clothing retailer can maintain control and visibility over the user's identity and access.

NEW QUESTION # 907

Which of the following is NOT true of the Kerberos protocol?

- A. Only a single login is required per session.
- B. The initial authentication steps are done using public key algorithm.
- C. The KDC is aware of all systems in the network and is trusted by all of them
- D. It performs mutual authentication

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Kerberos uses shared secret keys and tickets for the initial authentication, not a public key algorithm.

Incorrect Answers:

A: Kerberos is an example of a single sign-on system for distributed environments, and therefore only requires a single login per session.

C: the foundation of Kerberos security is trust that clients and services have in the integrity of the KDC.

D: Kerberos provides mutual authentication in that both the user and the server verify each other's identity.

NEW QUESTION # 909

Information security metrics provide the GREATEST value to management when based upon the security manager's knowledge of which of the following?

- A. Benefits related to quantitative analysts
- B. Cost of implementing effective controls
- C. Likelihood of a security breach
- D. Value of information assets

Answer: D

Explanation:

Information security metrics provide the greatest value to management when based on the value of information assets. The value of information assets is determined by the impact of their loss or compromise on the organization's objectives, reputation, and operations. By measuring the value of information assets, security managers can prioritize the protection of the most critical assets, justify the investment in security controls, and communicate the value of security to the management and stakeholders.
