Adobe Real-Time CDP Business Practitioner Professional Sample Questions (Q37-Q42):

NEW QUESTION # 37

Which key distinction differentiates edge profiles from hub profiles?

- A. Edge profiles store data locally for low-latency processing, while hub profiles store data centrally.
- B. Edge profiles are exclusive to offline data sources, while hub profiles handle online data.
- C. Edge profiles are used for batch processing, while hub profiles are for real-time actions.
- D. Edge profiles only support structured data, while hub profiles support unstructured data.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 38

How does the Adobe Real-Time CDP manage data when multiple records, coming from different sources but belonging to the same customer, are processed?

- A. It merges all records into a single, unified profile for the customer
- B. It only keeps the most frequent appearing record across all sources
- C. It creates separate profiles for each of the received records
- D. It assigns different importance weights to different sources and merges records based on these weights

Answer: A

Explanation:

The fundamental value proposition of Adobe Real-Time CDP is its ability to break down data silos by creating a 360-degree view of the customer. When the system ingests multiple records from different sources (such as a CRM system, an e-commerce platform, and web clickstream data) that share common identifiers, it uses the Identity Service to recognize they belong to the same person. The platform then dynamically merges these "profile fragments" into a single, unified Real-Time Customer Profile. This merging happens in real-time, ensuring that as soon as new data arrives, it is reflected in the unified view. This process allows for consistent personalization across channels; for example, a purchase made offline in a retail store can immediately suppress "buy now" ads for that same product on the website.

Option B is incorrect as it describes the very siloed state the CDP is designed to solve. Option C is incorrect because the platform preserves all relevant behavioral and attribute data rather than discarding records based on frequency. Option D is a slight misinterpretation of Merge Policies; while Merge Policies can prioritize one source over another for a specific attribute (Timestamp-ordered or Dataset-precedence), the platform still merges the records into a single profile rather than just weighing them.

NEW QUESTION # 39

A marketer needs to quickly validate that data ingested into a dataset processed to Profile successfully. Using the AEP, in which two ways can the marketer perform this task? (Choose two.)

- A. Sources > Data Flow
- B. Identities > Browse
- C. Monitoring > Batch
- D. Dataset > Activity
- E. Query service

Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION # 40

A financial institution is using Adobe RT-CDP to activate data to an ad platform. The dataset includes sensitive information such as account balances.

What guardrails should they apply during activation?

- A. Include all data fields in the activation for completeness.
- B. Limit the activation to edge-based triggers.
- C. Perform manual activation workflows.
- D. Use DULE policies to restrict sensitive data from being exported.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 41

A global e-commerce company wants to leverage Adobe RTCDP to implement different types of segmentation (edge, streaming, batch) to drive personalized marketing campaigns and optimize customer experiences.

The company aims to deliver real-time, dynamic, and relevant content to their customers across multiple touchpoints and wish to engage their customers with relevant messages while the customer is engaging with the brand.

What are the two best two options to consider? (Choose two.)

- A. Edge Segmentation
- B. Multi-Entity Segmentation
- C. Streaming Segmentation
- D. Batch Segmentation

Answer: A,C
