NEW QUESTION # 64

At the strategy level, a major component of waste can be avoided by ensuring the enterprise:

- A. Only begins an initiative when a budget is approved for all work
- B. Has comprehensive business cases approved by senior management
- C. Has a shared understanding of organizational goals and priorities
- D. Has changes to existing work approved by senior management

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 65

When working in the Strategy Horizon and identifying the needs to be met, analysis related work helps an organization better allocate resources. This describes the business analysis principle of:

- A. Analyze to determine what is valuable
- B. Understand what is doable
- C. Develop sound business case
- D. Plan strategic initiatives and projects

Answer: A

Explanation:

The principle of Analyze to Determine What is Valuable is central to the Strategy Horizon, where the focus is on identifying and prioritizing the needs that will provide the most benefit to the organization. In an agile context, this principle ensures that resources are not spent on initiatives that do not align with the organizational goals or offer low returns. By performing analysis at the strategic level, practitioners help decision-makers evaluate various opportunities and select those that offer the highest value-to-effort ratio. This continuous evaluation process allows the organization to remain flexible, pivoting away from less valuable work and toward higher-impact initiatives as market conditions and internal capabilities evolve. This proactive resource allocation is a hallmark of an agile mindset, focusing on outcomes over simple task completion.
