IIA Practice of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q411-Q416):

NEW QUESTION # 411

What type of audit engagement would be the most appropriate to determine how an organization could be more profitable in the long term?

- A. Performance audit
- B. Compliance and financial audit
- C. Quality audit
- D. Operational audit

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 412

Which of the following would be the least desirable criteria against which to judge current operations of an organization's treasury function?

- A. Finance textbook illustrations of generally accepted good treasury function practices.
- B. The operations of the treasury function as documented during the last audit engagement.
- C. Codification of best practices of the treasury function in relevant industries.
- D. Company policies and procedures delegating authority and assigning responsibilities.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Section: Volume C

NEW QUESTION # 413

An organization invests excess short-term cash in trading securities. Which of the following actions should an internal auditor take to test the valuation of those securities?*

- A. Perform a calculation of premium or discount amortization.
- B. Confirm the securities held by the broker.
- C. Compare the carrying value with current market quotations
- D. Use the equity method to recalculate the investment carrying value

Answer: C

Explanation:

* Testing Valuation: The valuation of trading securities requires comparing their carrying value with current market prices to ensure accuracy.

* Market Quotations: Current market quotations provide the most reliable and up-to-date information on the fair value of securities.

* Accounting Standards: This approach is consistent with accounting standards that require securities to be reported at fair value, reflecting any unrealized gains or losses.

* Verification Process: Comparing the carrying value with market quotations helps verify that the securities are appropriately valued on the financial statements.

NEW QUESTION # 414

Which of the following is the most appropriate approach for the internal audit activity to follow up on management action plans?

- A. Ensure that follow-up activities are performed by the most senior auditor on staff
- B. Ensure that follow-up activities are performed at least weekly.
- C. Create a tracking system for follow up
- D. Delegate follow-up activities to qualified administrative staff within the business unit

Answer: C

Explanation:

The most appropriate approach for internal audit activity to follow up on management action plans is to create a tracking system. This ensures that follow-up activities are systematically monitored and documented. Such a system can track the status of action plans, provide reminders for due dates, and record progress updates, thus ensuring that management's corrective actions are implemented and effective. Regular monitoring and tracking are essential to verify that issues identified in audits are addressed in a timely manner.

Which of the following best describes how an internal auditor would use a flowchart during engagement planning?

- Answer: A

During engagement planning, an internal auditor uses a flowchart to evaluate the design of controls. A flowchart visually represents the processes and controls within the organization, helping the auditor identify control points, weaknesses, and potential risks. This understanding is critical for planning the audit, as it allows the auditor to design tests that effectively assess whether the controls are properly designed and implemented to mitigate risks.
