NEW QUESTION # 34

How would you define an Access Control, to allow a user with itil role to have permission to create incident records?

- A. Name: incident None, Permission: create; Role: itil
- B. Name: incident"; Permission: write; Role: itil
- C. Name: incident. None; Operation: create; Role: itil
- D. Name: incident.*; Operation: write; Permission: itil
- E. Name: incident Any, Operation: write, Permission: itil

Answer: C

Explanation:

In ServiceNow, Access Control Rules (ACLs) are used to grant or restrict permissions for performing actions on a table or field.

To allow a user with the itil role to create Incident records, the correct Access Control Rule must:

Apply to the incident table

Grant the "create" operation

Be restricted to users with the "itil" role

Breaking Down the Correct ACL Configuration:

ACL Field

Correct Value

Name

incident.None (applies to the table-level, not a field)

Operation

create (allows creating new records)

Role

itil (only users with the itil role can create incidents)

Why is "incident.None" used instead of "incident.*"?

incident.None → Applies to the entire table (for record creation).

incident.* → Applies to all fields in the table (not needed for create operations).

Incorrect Answer Choices Analysis:

A . Name: incident"; Permission: write; Role: itil

Incorrect - The "write" permission allows editing existing records, but does not allow creating new ones.

B . Name: incident Any, Operation: write, Permission: itil

Incorrect - There is no such name format "incident Any" in ACLs. Also, "write" does not allow record creation.

C . Name: incident.*; Operation: write; Permission: itil

Incorrect - "incident.*" applies to all fields in the table, but does not apply to record creation.

D . Name: incident None, Permission: create; Role: itil

Incorrect - The correct format uses "Operation: create", not "Permission: create".
