NEW QUESTION # 66

You are hardening the security posture of your Exadata Database Machine. Before disabling ssh access to the storage servers, what should you do to enable REST access to the MS process?

- A. Install Oracle Rest Data Services on each Database server and install the MS APEX application.
- B. Install Oracle Rest Data Services on each Storage server and install the MS APEX application.
- C. The MS Process on the storage servers is natively endowed with REST services and are enabled by default, however, appropriate roles and users should be created to ensure security.
- D. The MS Process on the storage servers is natively endowed with REST services, but are not enabled by default.

Answer: D

To enable REST access to the MS process, you need to manually enable the REST services on each storage server by running the command `cellcli -e "ALTER CELL ENABLE REST"` and then configure authentication and authorization to ensure secure access. This is described in detail in the Oracle Exadata Database Machine X9M Implementation Essentials Official Text Book (Chapter 8, Securing the Exadata Database Machine).

NEW QUESTION # 67

You are monitoring PMEM cache to see if it is being used effectively with RDMA. Which two of these sources contain information about the RDMA I/O statistics?

- A. Exadata Metrics (LIST METRICCURRENT)
- B. PMEM Cache Space Usage section in AWR Report
- C. PMEM Cache User Reads section in AWR Report
- D. Database IOs section in AWR Report
- E. Database Statistics (v$ View)

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

To monitor the effectiveness of Persistent Memory (PMEM) cache usage with RDMA on Exadata, information on RDMA I/O statistics can be found in:

PMEM Cache User Reads section in the AWR Report: This section provides detailed statistics on PMEM read operations, including user reads that leverage RDMA for direct memory access from PMEM. These metrics help gauge the utilization and efficiency of the PMEM cache.

Exadata Metrics (LIST METRICCURRENT): By using the LIST METRICCURRENT command within the Exadata environment, real-time metrics related to PMEM usage and RDMA I/O statistics can be accessed. This provides an immediate view of the current performance and activity on Exadata's persistent memory components.

These tools together offer insights into PMEM cache usage and the effectiveness of RDMA for optimized data access.
