NEW QUESTION # 65
A technician is troubleshooting a lack of outgoing audio on a third-party Windows 10 VoIP application, The PC uses a USB microphone connected to a powered hub. The technician verifies the microphone works on the PC using Voice Recorder. Which of the following should the technician do to solve the issue?

- A. Replace the USB microphone with one that uses a traditional 3.5mm plug.
- B. Delete the microphone from Device Manager and scan for new hardware,
- C. Enable the microphone under Windows Privacy settings to allow desktop applications to access it.
- D. Remove the microphone from the USB hub and plug it directly into a USB port on the PC.

Answer: C

Explanation:
In Windows 10, there are privacy settings that control access to certain devices, such as microphones, cameras, and other input devices. If the microphone is not enabled under these privacy settings, the VoIP application may not have access to it, causing a lack of outgoing audio.
The technician can go to the Windows 10 Settings menu, select the Privacy submenu, and under App permissions, select Microphone. The technician should then turn on the toggle switch for the VoIP application to allow it to access the microphone. Removing the microphone from the USB hub and plugging it directly into a USB port on the PC may or may not solve the issue, as the issue could be related to the privacy settings. Deleting the microphone from Device Manager and scanning for new hardware may also not solve the issue, as the issue could be related to the privacy settings. Replacing the USB microphone with one that uses a traditional 3.5mm plug is not recommended, as it would require purchasing a new microphone and may not solve the issue.

NEW QUESTION # 66
A computer is restarting automatically and displaying the following error message: "Your PC ran into a problem and needs to restart. We're just collecting some error info, and then we'll restart for you. (0% complete)." Which of the following should the technician do first to diagnose the issue?

- A. Check the system event logs.
- B. Verify the hardware driver versions.

- C. Install Windows updates.
- D. Perform a RAM diagnostic.

Answer: A

Explanation:
The first step is to check the system event logs using tools like Event Viewer. This will allow the technician to identify any critical errors or warnings that occurred before the restart. Based on these logs, further troubleshooting can be done. Verifying driver versions and performing diagnostics can follow once the root cause is identified.

NEW QUESTION # 67

After a security event, a technician removes malware from an affected laptop and disconnects the laptop from the network. Which of the following should the technician do to prevent the operating system from automatically returning to an infected state?

- A. Disable System Restore.
- B. Enable System Restore.
- C. Enable antivirus.
- D. Educate the user.
- E. Disable antivirus.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Explanation
System Restore is a feature that allows the user to revert the system to a previous state. However, this can also restore the malware that was removed by the technician. Disabling System Restore can prevent the operating system from automatically returning to an infected state. Enabling antivirus, educating the user, and enabling System Restore are good preventive measures, but they do not address the question. Disabling antivirus can make the system more vulnerable to malware attacks

FAT32 is compatible with most Microsoft operating systems since Windows 95 OSR2, as well as other operating systems such as Linux and Mac OS X.
FAT32 can support storage devices up to 2TB in size and files up to 4GB in size.
