NEW QUESTION # 12

According to GASB, the costs of which of the following activities associated with internally generated computer software should be capitalized?

- A. converting extra data not needed to make the software work
- B. selecting between alternatives for the software project
- C. training employees to use the software
- D. testing the software for functionality and ease of use

Answer: D

Explanation:

According to GASB Statement No. 51 - Accounting and Financial Reporting for Intangible Assets, costs associated with internally generated computer software can be capitalized only during the "application development stage." Activities in this stage that are capitalizable include:

Coding

Software configuration

Testing (for functionality)

Non-capitalizable activities include:

Preliminary project planning (e.g., selecting between alternatives)

Data conversion not necessary for the software to operate

Training employees

Therefore, testing the software for functionality is an activity that should be capitalized.

NEW QUESTION # 13

The four general government auditing standards are

- A. compliance, timeliness, qualifications and due professional care.
- B. qualifications, independence, due professional care and quality control.
- C. supervision, planning, management controls and evidence.
- D. planning, internal controls, independence and irregularities.

Answer: B

Explanation:

What Are the Four General Government Auditing Standards?

* These standards, as defined in the GAO Yellow Book (Government Auditing Standards):

* Qualifications: Auditors must have the necessary professional skills and competence to perform their work.

* Independence: Auditors must remain free from personal, external, and organizational impairments to maintain objectivity.

* Due Professional Care: Auditors must exercise care and diligence, adhering to professional standards and ethical requirements.

* Quality Control: Auditors must establish and maintain a system of quality control to ensure audit work meets professional standards.

Why Is Option D Correct?

* These four elements are explicitly outlined in the GAO Yellow Book as the core principles of government auditing standards.

Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* A. Compliance, timeliness, qualifications, and due professional care: Timeliness and compliance are not part of the four general standards; they are components of audit objectives.

* B. Supervision, planning, management controls, and evidence: These are aspects of audit performance, not general standards.

* C. Planning, internal controls, independence, and irregularities: Planning and internal controls are part of the audit process, not general standards.

References and Documents:

* GAO Yellow Book (Generally Accepted Government Auditing Standards - GAGAS): Lists qualifications, independence, due professional care, and quality control as the four general standards.

* AICPA Audit Standards: Aligns with GAGAS in emphasizing these four principles.
