Who is a pharmacy technician? Sometimes known as a pharmaceutical technician, pharmacy technician is a health care provider who performs pharmacy-related functions, generally working under the direct supervision of a licensed pharmacist. Job duties include dispensing prescription drugs and other medical devices to patients and instructing on their use. They may also perform administrative duties in pharmaceutical practice, such as reviewing prescription requests with doctor's offices and insurance companies to ensure correct medications are provided and payment is received.

Although this may not sound like the hardest job in the world, being a pharmacy technician isn't easy, as the work these people do directly affects the health of others. Therefore, it is vitally important that people hired as pharmacy technicians are qualified for this job. This is why more and more pharmacies and pharmacy chains expect their employees to have a valid PTCB credential.

According to the FDA, product recalls should be managed:

- A. According to the pharmacy manager's decision.
- B. By weekly checks and follow up if required.
- C. In accordance with the class.
- D. By the prescribing providers.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The FDA classifies recalls as Class I, II, or III based on the risk of adverse health consequences. Recall management actions (e.g., urgency, scope of notification, removal from stock, patient/provider notification) are carried out in accordance with the recall class and instructions from the manufacturer/FDA. This is a regulated, risk-based process, not left to discretionary managerial preference, routine weekly checks, or direction by prescribers.
