Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 82

A compliance officer needs to make a decision regarding an organization's sanctions screening process. Which decision is correct?

- A. Exclude beneficial owners of distributors from the screening.
- B. Include all business activities of the organization in the screening.
- C. Exclude vendors and other intermediaries from the screening.
- D. Include only customers and their transactions in the screening.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Sanctions and Compliance Domains state that screening must be applied to all relevant business activities and relationships that can expose an organization to sanctions risk. This includes customers, vendors, intermediaries, distributors, beneficial owners, and any party involved in transactions, supply chains, or service delivery.

Limiting screening only to customers is inconsistent with sanctions compliance expectations. Excluding vendors, intermediaries, or beneficial owners can expose an organization to significant sanctions violations due to indirect dealings with sanctioned parties.

Comprehensive coverage of all business activities is the standard approach in an effective sanctions compliance program.

Reference from Sanctions and Compliance Domains:

Requirements for comprehensive sanctions screening across all relevant business relationships.

Inclusion of customers, intermediaries, vendors, distributors, and beneficial owners.

Risk-based approach requiring full coverage of business activities to prevent indirect sanctions exposure.

NEW QUESTION # 83

In which way do notification and tipping-off differ?

- A. Tipping-off deprives a customer of legal defense while notification does not.
- B. Tipping-off is only relevant to financial institutions, whereas all entities with sanctions obligations must abide by notification requirements.
- C. Tipping-off is prohibited, and safeguards should be in place to prevent it, whereas notification is encouraged by regulators.
- D. Tipping-off assists law enforcement in its prosecution of entities, whereas notification assists subjects in their defense of prosecution.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Sanctions and Compliance Domains explain:

* Tipping-off is prohibited, as it may alert a customer that they are under investigation, impairing regulatory or law-enforcement action. Institutions must implement controls to prevent it.

* Notification, however, refers to permitted communication - such as informing a customer that their funds were frozen - when required or allowed by law (e.g., EU asset-freeze requirements), without revealing investigative details.

Tipping-off and notification serve entirely different purposes. Regulatory frameworks explicitly warn entities against tipping-off but do allow certain forms of notification that comply with legal obligations.

Reference:

Regulatory prohibition on tipping-off.

Permitted customer notifications regarding asset freezes or legal procedures.
