3. In addition to managing risk, what are several other ways HRM systems influence performance of an entire organization?	Human resource management policies and practices add value to organizations and influence organizational performance by either improving efficiency or contributing to revenue growth. Effective HRM systems increase the organization's ability to meet its goals, enhance the organization's ability to grow and manage change, and increase employee engagement, effort, and performance.
4. Explain HRM's role in executing an organization's business strategy.	Strategic human resource management aligns a company's values and goals with the behaviors, values, and goals of employees and influences the alignment of each of the three human resource functions, including staffing, performance management, training and development, and compensation. The alignment of these separate functions creates an integrated human resource management system supporting the execution of the business strategy, guided by the talent philosophy of the organization.

WGU Managing Human Capital C202 Sample Questions (Q28-Q33):

NEW QUESTION # 28

Why do employees who exhibit continuance commitment choose to remain employed with an organization?

- A. A feeling of moral or ethical obligation to the organization
- B. Perceived economic or social costs of leaving
- C. Strong identification with the organization's values and goals
- D. Close relationships with managers and peers

Answer: B

Explanation:

Organizational commitment is commonly categorized into affective, continuance, and normative commitment. According to Human Resource Management, 16th Edition by Gary Dessler, continuance commitment refers to an employee's attachment to an organization based on the perceived costs associated with leaving, rather than emotional attachment or moral obligation.

Employees with continuance commitment remain because they believe leaving would result in significant economic or social losses, such as loss of salary, benefits, retirement plans, seniority, or difficulty finding comparable employment. Dessler explains that this type of commitment is calculated and cost-based; employees stay not because they want to or feel they ought to, but because they feel they have to.

Close relationships and strong identification with organizational values reflect affective commitment, while moral or ethical obligation reflects normative commitment. Since the question specifically refers to continuance commitment, the correct explanation is the perceived economic or social costs of leaving.

NEW QUESTION # 29

Which type of benefit is typically more secure for unionized workers than for nonunionized workers?

- A. Merit pay
- B. Guaranteed pensions
- C. 401(k) plans
- D. Individual bonuses

Answer: B

Explanation:

Unionized workers often enjoy stronger benefit protections because benefits are negotiated and formalized through collective bargaining agreements. According to Human Resource Management, 16th Edition by Gary Dessler, guaranteed pensions, particularly defined benefit pension plans, are typically more secure for unionized employees than for nonunionized employees.

Unions have historically prioritized retirement security and have negotiated pension plans that guarantee a specific retirement benefit based on factors such as years of service and earnings. These benefits are legally binding components of labor contracts and cannot be easily altered or eliminated by employers without union agreement.

In contrast, benefits such as merit pay, individual bonuses, and even 401(k) plans are more commonly used in nonunionized environments and are often discretionary or subject to market performance. Dessler explains that many employers have shifted away from guaranteed pensions for nonunion employees due to cost and risk, while unions continue to protect these benefits for their members.

Thus, the benefit that is typically more secure for unionized workers is guaranteed pensions.

NEW QUESTION # 30

What is the difference between sourcing and recruiting?

- A. Sourcing is a strategy to attract candidates to an employer, and recruiting is a process for making employers desire certain candidates.
- B. Sourcing focuses on factors external to an employer, and recruiting focuses on factors internal to an employer.
- C. Sourcing relies on interpersonal skills to attract candidates to apply for positions, and recruiting is a process for identifying talent pools.
- D. Sourcing identifies the best applicants to meet staffing goals, and recruiting takes steps to convert potential candidates into applicants.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Sourcing and recruiting are two distinct but interrelated steps in the hiring process. Sourcing involves identifying and attracting potential candidates who have the skills and qualifications necessary to meet the organization's staffing needs. This process can include searching for candidates through various channels such as job boards, social media, networking events, and employee referrals. Once a pool of potential candidates is identified, the recruiting process begins. Recruiting involves engaging with these candidates, assessing their suitability for the role, and encouraging them to apply for the open positions. This includes activities such as conducting interviews, evaluating applications, and managing the offer process. By differentiating between sourcing and recruiting, organizations can streamline their hiring processes and ensure they attract and hire the best possible talent.

NEW QUESTION # 31

Which activity is benefited by maintaining skills inventories for current employees?

- A. Workforce redeployment efforts
- B. External sourcing methods
- C. Legal hiring procedures
- D. Voluntary termination practices

Answer: A

Explanation:

As skills inventory is a database or record of employees' current skills, abilities, experiences, education, and qualifications. According to Human Resource Management, 16th Edition by Gary Dessler, maintaining accurate skills inventories is especially valuable for workforce redeployment efforts.

Dessler explains that organizations use skills inventories to match employees with internal job openings, project assignments, or new roles when business needs change. During restructuring, downsizing, or strategic shifts, skills inventories allow management to identify employees who can be reassigned or retrained rather than laid off. This supports internal mobility, reduces turnover costs, and preserves organizational knowledge.

Skills inventories are not primarily used for voluntary termination practices or legal hiring procedures. While they may indirectly support staffing decisions, they are far more critical for internal workforce planning than for external sourcing. External sourcing focuses on recruiting talent from outside the organization, whereas skills inventories emphasize maximizing the use of existing human capital.

Therefore, the activity most directly benefited by maintaining skills inventories is workforce redeployment efforts.

NEW QUESTION # 32

Which behavior from a manager qualifies as workplace bullying?

- A. Mistakenly revealing personal information about an employee during a staff meeting
- B. Documenting negative observations in an employee's performance review
- C. Responding with an irritated tone of voice to an employee's disruptive behavior
- D. Consistently ignoring emails and questions from one particular employee

Answer: D

Explanation:

Workplace bullying is defined as repeated, unreasonable actions directed toward an employee that are intended to intimidate, degrade, or undermine them. According to Human Resource Management, 16th Edition by Gary Dessler, bullying often involves persistent behaviors such as exclusion, isolation, or deliberately withholding information necessary for an employee to perform their job.

Consistently ignoring emails and questions from one specific employee fits this definition because it represents ongoing, targeted behavior that can harm the employee's ability to work effectively and can cause emotional distress. Dessler highlights that bullying is distinguished from occasional irritation or isolated mistakes by its repetitive and targeted nature.

An irritated tone used in response to disruptive behavior may be poor communication but does not necessarily constitute bullying. Accidentally revealing personal information is a confidentiality breach, not bullying.

Documenting negative observations in a performance review is a legitimate management responsibility when done objectively and fairly.

Thus, the behavior that qualifies as workplace bullying is consistently ignoring emails and questions from one particular employee.
