An internal audit manager is planning a contract compliance audit. Which of the following should be done prior to developing the audit work program?

- A. Document underlying reasons for noncompliance
- B. Select a sample of invoices for substantive testing
- C. Assess the inherent risk of paying duplicate invoices
- D. Review the contract for evidence of authorization

Answer: D

Explanation:

Before developing the audit work program, it is essential to review the contract for evidence of authorization.

This step ensures that the contract is valid and approved by the appropriate parties, forming a critical basis for the compliance audit. By confirming authorization, the auditor can ascertain that the contract is legitimate and enforceable, and understand its key terms and conditions, which is necessary for planning and executing the audit effectively.
