What objects can be cloned within Snowflake? (Select TWO).

- A. Internal named stages
- B. External tables
- C. Users
- D. Schemas
- E. External named stages

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

In Snowflake, cloning is available for certain types of objects, allowing quick duplication without copying data:

Schemas: These can be cloned, enabling users to replicate entire schema structures, including tables and views, for development or testing.

Internal named stages: These stages, used to store data files within Snowflake, can also be cloned, preserving configurations for data loading.

Users and external objects (like external stages or tables) cannot be cloned due to their dependency on external data and configurations outside Snowflake.

NEW QUESTION # 699

Which DDL/DML operation is allowed on an inbound data share?

- A. MERGE
- B. SELECT
- C. INSERT INTO
- D. ALTER TA3LE

Answer: B

In Snowflake, an inbound data share refers to the data shared with an account by another account. The only DDL/DML operation allowed on an inbound data share is SELECT.
