What is a benefit of a model-driven approach for infrastructure automation?

- A. provides a small learning curve and helps system administrators with limited coding experience
- B. enables a user to understand a declarative language to translate the model into an actionable script
- C. ensures that system administrators gain a good understanding of coding and expand their experience and capabilities
- D. enforces the generation of all automation scripts through the modeling environment

Answer: A

Explanation:
A model-driven approach for infrastructure automation offers several benefits. One of the primary advantages is that it provides a small learning curve and helps system administrators with limited coding experience. By using high-level models and declarative languages, administrators can define the desired state of the infrastructure without needing to write complex scripts.
Declarative Language: Model-driven approaches use declarative languages that allow users to specify what the desired state should be, rather than how to achieve that state. This abstracts the complexity of the underlying automation processes.
