Snowflake SnowPro Advanced Administrator ADA-C02 Sample Questions (Q30-Q35):

NEW QUESTION # 30

A company has implemented Snowflake replication between two Snowflake accounts, both of which are running on a Snowflake Enterprise edition. The replication is for the database APP_DB containing only one schema, APP_SCHEMA. The company's time Travel retention policy is currently set for 30 days for both accounts. An Administrator has been asked to extend the time Travel retention policy to 60 days on the secondary database only. How can this requirement be met?

- A. Set the data retention policy on the primary database to 60 days.
- B. Set the data retention policy on the secondary database to 60 days.
- C. Set the data retention policy on the primary database to 30 days and the schemas to 60 days.
- D. Set the data retention policy on the schemas in the secondary database to 60 days.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Snowflake replication, Time Travel retention is determined by the primary database and is replicated to the secondary. The secondary cannot have a longer retention than the primary. To extend retention to 60 days on the secondary, the primary database's retention must be increased to 60 days.

NEW QUESTION # 34

What is a characteristic of Snowflake's transaction locking and concurrency modeling?

- A. A deadlock cannot occur in Snowflake, since concurrently executed queries and DML statements do not block one another.
- B. Transaction locking in Snowflake is enforced exclusively at the row and table levels.
- C. If two queries are concurrently executed against the same table, one of the two queries will be blocked until the other query completes.
- D. Queries executed within a given transaction see that transaction's uncommitted changes.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Snowflake uses multi-version concurrency control (MVCC), which allows queries and DML statements to operate without blocking each other. This architecture eliminates the possibility of deadlocks because transactions work on snapshots of data rather than locking rows or tables in ways that could cause contention.
