NEW QUESTION # 13

Which of the following is the recommended guideline for creating a new user role?

- A. Create a new unique role for each unique user.
- B. Create two roles based on capabilities and indexes, then utilize inheritance.
- C. There are no recommended guidelines when creating new user roles.
- D. Create a role that incorporates capabilities and index inheritance.

Answer: D

Explanation:

When creating new user roles in Splunk, it's recommended to define roles that incorporate the necessary capabilities and index access permissions. This approach allows for granular control over user access and aligns with best practices for role-based access control.

"You can create custom roles and assign those roles to your users. Custom roles let you make granular adjustments to user access, including... Role inheritance... Capabilities... Allowed and default indexes..."

- About configuring role-based user access -

By creating roles that incorporate both capabilities and index access, administrators can efficiently manage user permissions and maintain a secure Splunk environment.
